The War

During the last two or three weeks there have been great things "a-doin'" in Masachuria, and the civilized world outside of Russia has been looking on with something of the feeling that attaches to the witnessing of a good game of hockey or lacrosse. Such is one of the horrors of modern war: the familiarity with bloody details, rendered possible by wire and newspaper enterprise, is surely having an effect the opposite of humanizing. Thousands of brave men shot dead, a happler lot perhaps than thousands of other wounded and lacerated by shot and shell and dying in frost and snow; living soldiers making barricades of their dead and dying comrades suggest gruesome thoughts, which fail to horrify amid the glamour of victory to our favorite side.

This, in conjunction with the troubles of the deepest kind at home, may lead to peace. The Russian fleet at Madagascar appears to be planning to go back to the Baltic, beaten without a blow, and this humiliation heaped on other troubles will compel even Russian autocracy to do some thinking.

Should Kuropatkin succeed in escaping with his army as far as the Pass the agony may be prolonged a little but the final result is not in doubt.

Address and Presentation.

About 10 days ago a number of the friends and neighbors of Mr and Mrs. Alex Bell, near Rob Roy, met to spend an evening with them previous to their removal to town. They were warmly and in the course of the evening the following address was read which speaks for itself.

MR. AND MRS. BELL.— Having heard that you are about to move from amongst us to spend your declining years in Durham we have gathered this evening to visit you a last time, express our regret at your departure, show you in a measure with what esteem you have been regarded by your neighbors, and to wish you God speed on leaving. You have been connected with this district now for many years, and have shown yourself ever ready to lend a helping hand to those in need. You have lived in peace and quietness with all, have sorrowed with our sorrows, and been glad with our gladness. You, Mr Bell, in your capacity of Assessor for so long a time, by your faithfulness and complete knowledge of things have the assurance that no one else in your place has ever done his work with fewer mistakes or more satisfaction to the people and council of Glenelg.

To help to show, in more than mere words, our appreciation of you both we present you with these chairs, wishing you many years' comfort in their use, and hoping that as you recline therein you will sometimes think of your old neighbors.

Mr Bell replied appropriately and Reeve McFadden being appointed an impromptu chairman, called on Messrs Win Young and Geo Aljoe for brief addresses. The ladies present provided snapper refreshments and a very pleasant evening was spent.

FARMERS' ATTENTION!

Dehorn Your Cattle—Castrate Your Lambs. This is, in brief, the substance of a circular issued to the farmers of Ontario by D McDonald, Esq., of the firm McDonald & Maybee of Toronto Commission dealers in cattle, sheep and hogs. In no part of Ontario would the advice above given be of greater value than in South Grey, where the farmers depend almost entirely upon the production of live stock.

Mr McDonald says, "I spent the greater part of last month in Chicago and New York looking after the cattle and sheep trade." The result of his visit may be summed up as follows:— The Americans are death on horned cattle and will not buy such except at a discount of 25 cents per 100 lbs live weight as compared with dehorned cattle. This is a great loss in dollars and cents, besides, it makes our markets a place that the American does not like to patronize as our horned cattle do not suit him.

Our American cousins also complain of our cattle being bruised. Too many of our farmers, in taking their cattle to market, pound them freely with a heavy stick. This is not only a cruel practice and punishment, but it has a very bad effect upon the appearance of the carcass when it is dressed. Every blow bruises the tender membrane underlying the hide, a local inflammation is produced which gives a very unsightly appearance to the flesh, to say nothing of the unwholesomeness of the part as human food. Such blows should be scrupulously avoided.

THE LAMB TRADE. This is one of our most profitable branches of industry. Mr McDonald writes that the number of lambs exported to Buffalo last year reached the grand total of 40,000. A market for the entire lot could be had in Toronto at Buffalo prices if all the lambs were slaughtered. Of the 40,000, 20,000 were sold for export and there is no reason why the whole lot could not have been handled in Toronto if they were in proper shape.

The New York dealers will not buy Toronto lambs as there are too many backs among them. Sometimes as many as 80 per cent of the lambs sent to Toronto are backs. The Yankee does not want them, he pays 75 cents per hundred less for such lambs.

By attending to the lambs properly the princely sum of $40,000 would be gained annually by the sheep raisers of Ontario. There are many other advantages to be derived from the castration of the lambs that every farmer knows. Farmers see to it, that your colts and sheep are fitted for the best market and the profit will be your own.—Com.

Pasture Crops.

The area of cleared land devoted to pasture in Ontario amounts to nearly three million acres, and that devoted to hay and clover to about two and one-half million acres annually. A large number of grasses and clovers have been grown in the Experimental Department of the Ontario Agricultural College, both singly and in combination, for pasture and for hay. The results of seed now on hand are as follows: Red Clover, 7 lbs.; Alsike Clover, 2 lbs.; Timothy 4 lbs.; and Orchard Grass, 2 lbs., making a total of 15 lbs per acre. This mixture can also be used for hay, but when the chief aim is the production of hay the Orchard Grass is not included and only 10 lbs of seed per acre are sown.

Farmers frequently write in the spring of the year, stating that through lack of germination of the grass and clover seed, the killing of the plants by the hot dry weather of the summer, or the leaving of the clover in the early spring, the pasture crop is likely to be deficient in the coming season, and asking what they can sow in the spring of the year that will furnish the best pasture in the same season. In each of four years we conducted an experiment in testing fourteen different kinds of crops for the production of pasture in the same season in which the seed was sown. As a result of these experiments we find that we can get better returns from a combination of varieties than from any one variety sown by itself. The following mixture, when sown in the spring, is likely to be ready for use at about six weeks after the seed is sown and to give good satisfaction in furnishing pasture throughout the summer; Danish and one-half bushels; Early Amber Sugar Cane, thirty pounds; and Common Red Clover, seven pounds; thus making a total of eighty eight pounds of seed per acre.

Sometimes a farm contains a considerable amount of comparatively rough land, or fields which lie at a long distance from the buildings, and the owner is anxious to use a mixture of grasses and clovers which will make a permanent pasture. From twenty years' results in testing different varieties of grasses and clovers, both singly and in combination, we would suggest the following mixture for permanent pasture: average seed; Orchard Grass, 4 lbs.; Meadow Fescue, 4 lbs.; Tall Oat Grass, 3 lbs.; Timothy, 2 lbs.; Meadow Fescue, 2 lbs.; Lucerne, 5 lbs.; Alsike Clover, 2 lbs.; and White Clover, 2 lbs.; thus making a total of 24 pounds of seed per acre. Some of these varieties produce grass very early in the spring; while others are later and furnish a good bite during the hot dry weather, which occurs frequently in the months of July and August. The seed can be sown in early spring either with or without a grain crop. Such a mixture as this, when once well established on suitable land, should form a pasture abundant in growth, excellent in quality, and permanent in character.

Stay Where You Are.

They tell me, young man, that you are thinking of leaving the farm. Don't do it; keep close to the soil. You are tired feeding the cattle, the sheep, and the pigs, tired of chopping the wood, tired of cleaning the stable out, tired of the store on the corner—tired of it all. You have visited the city and its roar fascinated you, every one seemed well dressed and happy, and the laughter and conversation of the passers by were music to your ear.

You have seen the great houses of the rich and their carriages, their sleighs and flying robes. You have gone to church on Sunday evening, to the big church, bright with electricity with the choir above, and the organ towering over all. You have gone to the theatre, you have seen the comedy and were pleased, you have seen the tragedy and were stirred, and here you are now sitting by the kitchen stove in your quiet home, and in a little while you will have to go out and look after the stock.

You are tired of it all. Don't say that; you are the most independent and most important man on God's footstool. You know no boss. If you went to the city you would become one of the mob who work by the clock and the whistle. Now you can take a day and no one can stop you. If you went to the shop you would become part of the machine. They would tell you to do this and you would have to do it, to do that and you would have to obey orders. You, young man, would be an employe, working for wages, for so much a day. Now, you are an employer in league with Nature, who serves and works while you sleep, who rears the grain while you rest, and transforms your orchard into a bank account through the warm sun and rain.

Stay with the farm, young man, and some day dad will tell you that the place is yours, for he is growing too old, and will move to the town to take his well-earned rest. Stay with the farm, for it is a healthy spot to live on, where you get a complexion from Nature's brush, and all your needs are met in God's gymnasium; where you need no medicine to make you well.

Stay with the farm, where life is natural and friendships more real, where you can wear what you want when you want, and there is none who will criticize. Stay with the farm, with its peace and tranquillity, from the it of trust and friendliness, from the colts who follows you up and down the line to the swallow who builds in the barn.
