 HER ROYAL HIGHNESS.

By Constance Morris.

From the Red Book Edgerton, stroiling leisurely through the corridor of the big hotel, looked in on the brilliantly-lighted dining-room through a long sheen of glass. The breath of the soft spring night, entering the open windows, fanned the flame of the candles under their red, silkenflounced shades, and wafted to him the fragrance of the flowers on the snowwhite tables a-glitter with silver and
