Mr E W Horning's stories of "Raffles: the Amateur Cracksman," are universally admitted to be the most fascinating tales of criminal adventure ever written. The character of Raffles, the gentleman burglar and jewel-robber, is one new to fiction; the story of his exploits excel in vigor and thrilling interest the work of any other modern writer. The Mail and Empire will begin publication in the Daily on May 13th, and the Weekly edition on May 18th of Mr Horning's new series of "Amateur Cracksman" tales, which have never before appeared in periodical form.

The first of these toles, "The Ides of March." introduces Raffles and his taithful companion, "Bunny," in their first and most exciting burglary of the
