How Bridge Began.

The advent of the game of Bridge to London, was on this wise. One afternoon the customary rubber of whist was being played at the Portland Club, which has long been recognized as the headquarters of scientific card games . Among the players was Lord Brougham, who had recently re turned from the south of Europe. When it came his turn to deal he omitted to turn up the last trump card, placing it face downward on his own pack, and his op ponents claimed a misdeal, in accordance with the laws of the game. He apologized to his partner, saying, "I am very sorry, but I forgot that I was not playing bridge." "Bridge," said the others, "what is bridge?" To which he replied that it was by far the best card game ever invented. After the rubber was over some one suggested that Lord Brougham should show them this won-derful game, which he at once proceeded to do, and from that day onward bridge was an established fact at the Portland

Club. From the oPrtland it very soon travelled to the Turf Club, where it met with a still greater welcofe than at the Portland; after this it spread to other clubs, and wherever it was once introduced it was welcomed with open arms as a delightfuul change from the stereo-Mr. Edward Cooper shows a pretty typed methods and precise formulae of wit in an article in the Daily Mail on scientific whist.
