Durham of the Olden Time. A Relic Brought to Notice Again.

Mr Editor, MY DEAR SIR,— More than half a century ago, I used to be not a Sunday school teacher, but a Sunday School scholar. Some time ago I unexpectedly came across the old school house, and a few nights ago I took a ramble through it and after my ramble was over, I thought of the words of the poet, on the downfall of old Napoleon, in which he says: "No more at St. Cloud's, He'll appear in great splendor, Nor go forth with his crowds Like the great Alexander. He may sigh to the winds By the great Moundania With his eyes o'er the waves That surround St Helena."

The research, interest and perseverance necessary to pursue this course to so successful a finish cannot but result in good to the students and a deeper spiritual life in S. School and community.
