The grocers were near the mark when they decided to placard their stores with signs which admit of no excuse for non recognition, "Keep your dog out," or ' Please leave your dog at home when shopping." Some people become indignant when their dog a swift run for the door, too often after it has made itself a nuisance. The indignation would more appropriately belong to the grocer or dry goods man and owners of dogs should remember that indignation is as poor an apology as it is remuneration for destroyed goods. There is no excuse for the shopping with-a dog habit and the soor er united actiou is taken to relieve the business men of the nuisance the hetter the satisfaction will be all around. Keep your dogs at home when you go shopping or train it to stay on the street. People guilty of the practise of allowing their dogs to follow them into stores have no ground for sensitiveness if they are told that the damage their canine company causes urchases.—O. S. Times.

During the thunderstorm yesterday morning about 4 o'clock a loud report was heard in the rear of Mr Walter Ellis drug store. Mr T. H. Ellis, who lives upstairs, hastened down and found the ceiling of the telegraph office ablaze. The prompt application of water extinguished the fire, which had started where the telegraph wires and electric light wires approached each other, but were still 6 inches apart. A rosette was broken, the insulating material of the wires was burnt, and the paper on the ceiling burnt and blackened .- Mt For-

The paucity of the comment was an evidence of acceptance, and, we may take it a source of gratification to the Minister of Finance personally; it also threw into most unfavorable contrast the protraction of the debate upon the Autonomy Bill. And the disproportionate nature of the consideration given these respective features has been reflected in the press of the country, and particularly in the Torento press.

An exchange speaks of a man who recently procused a wife through a matrimonial agency but is now trying to get a divorce. This is simply another instance of the mail order bargain not being up to the mark, and that a much better article could have been procured at home. We say it serves him right, he ought to have patronized home industry. The home grown article is usually the best. Young men don't be duped through the mail order, always deal at home and thus secure best quality

Principal Blakeston, some weeks ago applied for a school in Stratford, and not having any word, supposed some-one else was the successful applicant. He, however, received a letter from a friend there last Friday congratulating him on his appointment. It appears the secretary of the board neglected to notify him. He went to Stratford Monday to make arrangements for moving.
