Romantic Lake St Clair & Canal.

Jeannettes Creek, Aug. 23, 1905.

Dear Editor,—

To those who possess knowledge of Geography may not be sufficiently detailed to locate Jeannettes Creek I may say that it is a navigable stream that enters the river Thames near its exit into Lake St Clair.

So, slowly but surely the work of making soil was going on till in the lapse of ages there doubtless had stretched fine plains lifted high and dry above the surrounding waters.

As I enjoy here the fresh breath from the lake and see the ships sailing over the river as if they were gliding over the land I cannot but think how unlikely a few years ago, we would have thought of this spot as a place of enjoyment.

Steadily the country is developing, though the severe winter of 1903-04 and the high water in the spring destroyed many of the apple trees and scarcely left a wreck of the fine peach orchards that promised so fair.

The casual traveller is apt to think the crops this year worse than usual owing to the luxuriant weeds everywhere in evidence. I have to confess indeed to a little surprise when I was told that crops were away above the average.

Few things are calculated to give a better idea of the greatness of the American continent than to get a glimpse of the immense traffic between the east and the west. It is like putting your hand on some artery, that, at whatever point of the body you touch it, you will feel the great heat throbbing.

of the vastness of the continent of our northern land as few things are calculated to do.

Speaking of the St Clair canal your readers will remember that this channel though prepared by both Governments was, by the final survey declared to be all in Canadian territory. At every proposal on the part of the Americans to take away the bonding privilege, which citizens of both countries have long enjoyed, the stock rejoinder was the closing of the Canal to American traffic.

Along the western side of this the American dredges are busy excavating a new channel. The mode of dredging was to use a novel, instead of the old fashioned dipper with a crane to swing its load on to a lighter, there is simply a sand pump with a pipe connection half a mile or so in length through which the sand and water is forced by compressed air.

Already I have said enough for the space at my disposal yet I crave your indulgence to note the great pleasure I had at hearing a sermon from Dr E Oliver whom I knew on my first charge as a bright, round faced, dark-eyed boy, not yet into his teens.

Ever yours, sincerely, WM. FARQUHARSON.

Going to The Western.

In two weeks the great pioneer Fall Exhibition at London will open.

Only two weeks more until the opening of the Western Fair, the pioneer of all the big agricultural exhibitions Sept. 8 to 16.

This fair has annually for 38 years afforded instruction and pleasure for thousands of people in Western Ontario and this year will be no exception to the rule.

Many exhibits of an instructive nature are being added this year for the first time. Practical demonstrations in new methods of butter and cheese making will be given daily in the splendid new dairy hall, which is worth many times over the cost of reaching the fair to every farmer and dairyman.

The amusements are entirely new. Among them will be three concert evenings by the Ninety-first Highland Regiment Band, a great musical treat; leaving the gap in mid-air in a steam automobile by Mons. Brattonne, a daring act, and clever and perilous high wire performances by Prof. Hardy, the "American Blondin," and greatest aerial artist the world has ever seen.

A pleasant and enjoyable outing is guaranteed everyone who visits the Western Fair this year.
