NICHOL—McCORMACK

On Wednesday, Oct. 4 last the home of Mr Don McCormack, Swinton Park was the scene of a happy festive gathering, the occasion being the marriage of his youngest daughter Miss Jessie Isabel to Mr John Nichol of Glenelg. Rev Mr Matheson was the officiating clergyman and the happy couple were supported by the groom's brother, Rev Walter Nichol, of Woodstock and Miss Wilson of Swinton Park. The usual hearty congratulations followed from the company and were followed by a sumptuous wedding dinner and later an evening of mirth and jollity which will be long remembered by the participants. To the happy couple the Review extends felicitations and good wishes for a long and happy life and regrets that so much of masculinity attended the furnishing of this report, as to put out of the question a trustworthy account of the bridal dresses. Our readers will take for granted these were as becoming and attractive as the wearers and that is saying a good deal.

BORN

NICHOL—In Glenelg, on Sept. 15, to Mr and Mrs Thos. Nichol, a daughter.

GUN—In Durham, on Tuesday, Oct. 10, to Dr and Mrs Arthur Gun, a daughter.

MARRIED

McDONALD—McFAYDEN—At the residence of the bride's brother, on Sept. 20th by the Rev J. A. Matheson, B.D. Peter McDonald, of Egremont, to Annie McFayden, of Proton.

NICHOL—McCORMACK—At the residence of the bride's father on Oct. 4th, by the Rev J. A. Matheson, B.D. John Nichol, of Glenelg, to Jessie Isabel, youngest daughter of David McCormack, Proton.

In Ladies' coats, Flarity takes the lead in quality, price and appearance. A new stock of this week.

New York Fashions.

A notable feature in the Autumn fashions is the wealth of color. The rose tones continue, and greens and orchard tints prevail in the gowns and in millinery. They appear to be in the dominant colors in the dress, velvets, and also in the lustrous failles that are with us once more under the newer name of mesaline faille. The browns of dead wood and the prune shades are also fashionable and are warmly welcomed by those of quiet taste. Greater distinction than ever is shown in the morning, afternoon and evening gowns. Both Empire and Empire effects are popular. Capes, peltries, and Empire wraps are in vogue and the lace Bridge coats are still greatly in demand.

The lingerie waist still holds its sway and will be worn all winter with semi-salinated gowns, over a high necked corset cover of silk for warmth.

To-day a woman's furs, like the rest of her apparel, must fit the time and place. In order to meet this requirement the furriers offer neckpieces—which seem to be preferable for the fur coat—suitable for all occasions. Bear, Beaver and mink will be worn with the morning costume, while chinchilla, sable and broadtail will be suitable for the afternoon, and ermine is strictly reserved for evening wear.

The Winter Millinery continues to follow the Autumn styles i. e., the high stiff crown, large and sharply tinted brims, and the prevailing trimming consisting in wings, ostrich plumes, and birds of paradise.—Helen Berkeley Lloyd in the Delineator for November.
