PERSONAL MENTION

1805—1905

The Nelson Centennial.

On Saturday last one hundred years had rolled round since that famous day in Trafalgar Bay when the combined fleets of France and Spain were crushed into impotence by Britain's greatest sailor Admiral Horatia Nelson. During 1803, 1804 and the first half of 1805 he had been scouring the seas to get into touch with the fleets of Napoleon, and though never getting into battle closeness with them he established so well the terror of his name and prowess that he kept the enemy in anxiety, prevented them from doing injury to British interests and not for an hour could they boast of controlling the English Channel.

The combined fleets had dodged about in the Mediterranean and succeeded in getting through the straits into the Atlantic. Nelson lost weeks by weather which favored the fleet but he followed every clue most shrewdly deciding they had gone to work harm in the West Indies. He followed them, gaining gradually, got to the islands and found track of them always a day or two late. For they knew he was on their track. After some time in this hide and seek game, unable to do injury, the enemy sailed for Europe, soon followed by the ever vigilant Nelson, who found Ireland and the shores of Britain safe still.

Nelson was thanked by the West India merchants and by everybody. For nearly two years he had never been off his ship, and had displayed such energy as was never seen before. To recruit his health he retired among his friends but not many days elapsed before word came of another massing of the enemy's fleets and who like Nelson to oppose them. His decision to again take command brought forth the most remarkable exhibitions of love and devotion from the populace, ever received by man and he entered the "Victory" for the last time. The end soon came: the fleets were at Cadiz, afraid to come out. Nelson took means to stop their supplies, and by keeping back his own fleet, encouraged them to come out. He had everything planned, the "Nelson touch" was written out at length and distributed among the fleet, and when at last on the morning of 21st of October 1805 he saw that battle was imminent, he issued his famous signal, to "please the fleet" as he said,—"England expects every man will do his duty."

About noon the battle began, at 5 p. m. it was over. The hero was shot from the tops of a French vessel and lived about 3 hours, long enough to know that the enemy was overwhelmed and to express his "Thank God, I have done my duty."

All Britain and her colonies went through the forms of rejoicing without the heart, for their darling one-armed one-eyed hero was dead. Dead, but not forgotten. He is not likely to be. Very strangely, Montreal, a French city, erected in 1808 the first monument to his memory, other memorials have followed and the century era has shown that deep down in the hearts of the citizens of the empire there is a glow for Nelson which needs little fanning to warm up.

A touching service at St Paul's London, on Saturday was duplicated at thousands of places. Sunday last many pupils referred to the man, his work and his memory. In all the celebrations there is not a trace of resentment to the defeated nations of that day. Amongst the wreaths at the Nelson column in Trafalgar Square, London, was one to the brave sailors of France and Spain who lost their lives at Trafalgar. It is heretofore in the abstract that is honored more than the Admiral, and Nelson's memory is a valuable asset of the Empire.

Grand Mogul Pure Tea

Grand Mogul is not exposed to store dust or microbes. The clean, air-tight packages are the housekeeper's protection against inferiority and dirt.

It comes to you free from adulteration—the nicest possible blend of the finest teas of Ceylon—and affords you double the satisfaction of "just as good" teas that are sold in bulk, or packed in poisonous lead. Grand Mogul appeals to the palate and tones up the nerves. Not a mere substitute for bitters.

Swinton Park

The teaming at Salem held on Monday was a great success, over $50 being made.

We are sorry to state that Mr Robt. Knox got hurt at Mrs. Jno Hardy's threshing on Friday. While climbing into the mow, he either fainted or missed his footing and fell, hitting his head and shoulder on the machine, which rendered him unconscious for a time but at latest accounts, he was getting better.

Mr Jas Pattison, our worthy merchant, has his sign up to sell out. A great snap for a quick purchaser.

Mr Jno H Richardson lost a valuable coat on Saturday night. One of the other horses kicked it and it was dead in the morning.

We are glad to state that all the scarlet fever patients are better.

We are sorry to state, that old Mrs Aldern is on the sick list at present. We hope soon to hear of her recovery.

We hear there was a great noise in the park a little over a week ago but I guess it was only a couple of people getting a little gas off their stomachs.

Mr Alex Richardson and Miss Maggie McCaffrey visited Dromore on Sunday last.

Miss Bell is engaged to teach in the school for another year. We notice a young gentleman with a very pleasant smile since he heard it.

I wonder who the young gentleman was who went out coon hunting with the horse and buggy on Monday night and when he got back he had a tortoise with a shell on it.

Thanksgiving services will be held in St. Andrews on Thursday the 26th by Rev. W. F. Roach.

The Sun.

In presenting the claims of other papers we would like to emphasize the importance of the Weekly Sun as a farmer's paper. It is a paper both for the Farm and Home its pages are free from sensationalism, every reader young and old, will find healthy reading matter in its pages, and the farmer who follows the markets,—and who progressive farmer doesn't?—will find them interestingly written up.

Clubbed with the Review for $1.75 till Jan 1, 1907.
