Outline of Summer Schools for Nature Study.

The summer school was held in the Normal school. On the first day we assembled in one of the class rooms, where we were greeted by the staff. Then the register was called and the pupils dismissed.

The work in Nature Study was taken by two of the Normal staff; Mr Scott taking the work on plants while Mr Elliot took the work on insects and birds.

In his first lecture Mr Elliot aimed to point out the objects of Nature study and what Nature study was. Nature Study, he said, was the study of nature in her relations to the child and from the child's standpoint. To secure accurate observation is important; but it is more important to understand what is observed. For instance there is not a boy or girl in our school but what has seen ants going up a tree. How many can tell you why they go up? The work should be done objectively, not from memory, the teacher's part being to direct the pupil's work.

In the course of his lectures on insects we were given the great classes and their general characteristics. We were given the life history of a great many. Their relationship to man was then pointed out showing how man very often destroys his best friend.

The work was given objectively—when the living object could not be had we studied from a collection. Some teachers say, "I can do nothing with that work, I have no collection." The advice is make one, either a private one or one for your school. The latter is more easily accomplished as the pupils would be delighted to do the work, the material is plentiful.

The following are the requisites for making a collection namely—a poison bottle, a stretching board, insect pins and insect case. To prepare a poison bottle secure a marmalade jar in which place ten cents worth of cyanide of potassium of the size of beans, pour in sufficient water to cover and add enough plaster of paris to absorb the water. The bottle should be left open a couple of hours to allow the plaster paris to set. The stretching board is of soft wood with a groove in centre for the body of the insect to rest in. It is used particularly in case of moths and butterflies, as they do not die with their wings spread. Insect pins, 3 and 4 standard white are used, costing 13 cents per hundred and are to be had from the Chas. Chapman Co. London. The case used by the Normal students last year was an ordinary flat cigar box. As to literature on insects we were advised to get Comstock's manual for the study of insects.

We were taken on excursions to the woods each armed with a poison bottle and note book. Our specimens were discussed at the beginning of the next lecture. The collector must be careful to note time and place, also not to injure the wings or the legs of the insects.

About one third of Mr Elliot's time was devoted to birds. In his first lecture he pointed out the objects and benefits of the study of birds also the pleasure of the study.

The birds were classed and each class sub-divided with characteristics of each. The relation of the haunts of birds and their food was made clear. Here again the relationship to man was taken. In this he pointed out that if man were properly informed of the various birds he would not kill them; for instance 90 per cent of the food of the chicken hawk is injurious rodents. Another case referred to was where man killed off the shore birds and this leads to an epidemic of fever. The study of birds is therefore essential to every boy and girl, particularly those of our rural schools.

The work is field work observing, noting time and place. For the work in our public schools a bird calendar of the following heads:

1. Name of bird.
  2. When first seen.
  3. How many seen.
  4. When next seen.
  5. When it became common.
  6. When last seen.
  7. Is it common or rare.
  8. Does it breed near its station.
  9. Remarks.
- Bird neighbors was recommended as literature.

In his first lecture Mr Scott stated that we must know the purpose before there can be definite plans, and the teacher must be careful to test the means or devices. Another fact noted was that it is not what a pupil knows but the way he knows it.

During his lectures on plants we first studied the plant as a whole, its functions, and its life relations. When this was finished we took the parts of the plant in the following order, root, stem, buds, leaves, flowers and seeds. Germination was also given a place. By request Mr Scott devoted some time to grafting.

In these lectures the work was taken objectively, usually from plants secured on our excursion. When the desired plant could not be obtained Mr Scott made use of his collection. Here again the making of a collection confronts us.

In making a collection of plants the following are necessary, a good knife, a trowel with a strong shoulder and a good handle (get this made at blacksmith's) a vasculum or close tin box about 18 inches long is found very useful in collecting fresh plants.

When collecting you should where possible collect root and shoot and two

RUSSIA FREE.

The bitter struggle of the last few weeks in Russia, punctuated by strikes and tragedies, has been checked by the Czar proclaiming freedom of the press, of union, of conscience and of religion. Do Wits has been appointed premier and is the man of the hour. The fall of the autocracy if not of the Romanoff dynasty seems assured. It is a great world spectacle.

Mr. J. C. Morgan, for the past thirty-four years inspector of public schools in East Simcoe, is about to resign, having accepted the position of superintendent of Foresters' Island and Orphan's Home, Deseronto.

The first Provincial elections in Alberta take place on Thursday, Nov 9. The date for Saskatchewan is not yet announced.

Review to Jan 1, 06, 15c

specimens of each being careful to note where found. Place your specimen on a spec sheet, then place on a dryer and put another dryer over, apply pressure being careful to change the dryers at least every 12 hours. Plants like liveforever require special treatment split the root then place in a vessel and pour boiling water over it to break up the starch cells before pressing. Then again in the case of sticky leafed plants it is necessary to put them between two spec sheets. Then there are those delicate plants which lose their color before they are dried. In some cases Mr Scott said he found ironing with an ordinary flat iron effectual.

When dried the plants should be mounted on white paper and properly labelled. Fish glue diluted with half quantity of water applied to every part of the wrong side of the plant. Leaves should appear with either sides up. These sheets should be placed in a genus cover.

The collector should examine his collection frequently as parasites often get in and destroy the specimens. Insect powder placed in the repository is found to be very effective.

In making a collection be careful that the mere show of a collection is not the end but instead it should be only a means of promoting the interest of the subject. Making a collection affords the teacher great opportunities of becoming acquainted with the character of the pupils.

The last day at the close of the regular work we assembled in one room where we were addressed by the staff and Mr Miller. Mr Miller's remarks may be summed up in the fact that we must not neglect the older studies in our desire to get along in the new. A few of the pupils spoke on behalf of the pupils and they highly praised the insight they had been given of the work. But teachers and pupils had a mutual feeling that the time was too short.
