REVIVAL.—The exhortatory injunction prominently displayed on this page is sent and paid for by Holstein friends who are experiencing all the warmth and blessing of a revival of religion. In Toronto the Torrey-Alexander meetings are arousing more and more interest, hundreds and hundreds being converted. The closing meetings in the churches here last week were even better than the first ones. A religious warmth is in the air.

Ireland's not taking stock this year. The people are being the stock and saving money by doing so.

VOTING IN ARTEMESIA.—Artemesia Council has allowed no grass to grow under the feet in the matter of local option, but, true to the spirit that elected them have brought in a by-law which is to be voted on Feb. 6 next. Not only is the council moving, the people, formed in the Artemesia Temperance Association, are moving also.

A joint stock company has been formed to raise funds to provide proper hotel accommodation at Fleshterton, Ceylon. Priceville and Eugenia and $3000 has already been subscribed as a guarantee. It is not likely it will be required: the necessary stationery. It should the new order of things and decide to keep the law in such a vigilant township when local option is secured, even though profits will be less. The council is guaranteed the cost of the election except the necessary stationery. It should the measure not carry, something no one seems to fear, however, a curious situation would result: the people voting down a measure they elected a council to put through.

I. O. F. CONCERT.—Concert lovers were gratified last Thursday evening by hearing in the Town Hall, Mr Donald McGreggor, the well known baritone singer, though his specialty is Scotch and patriotic songs, such as the "McGreggor's gathering," "Highlandman's Toast," etc., on this occasion he delighted his audience by his sweet rendering of an old Irish song, "Aileen Alannah." Will White, the comedian, was there with his grotesque costume and acting, causing much laughter by his clever impersonations, in the first part of the program especially. Miss Horning has a future before her as an elocutionist. Her rendering of "Kissing Cap's Race" was well done; voice, attitude and action blending nicely to produce the excitement of a horse race. She should cut out some of her other pieces and aim for something more classic if she is to attain prominence as a reader. Insp. Campbell was chairman and made some appropriate remarks in opening showing the strength and benefit of the order both as a world wide association and as a local court, paying a compliment to Mr Wm Johnston for his untiring interest in the work. The order was excellent and the proceeds came very near to meeting the entire expense.

Farmer's Institute.

Seed Fair Prize Winners.

Friday and Saturday last were notable Institute days and great were the possibilities for farmers, gardeners and others to learn useful things or communicate to others their knowledge. Pres. Wm Young and Secy. Binnie left no stone unturned to make a success of the gatherings. They were in Hanover on Thursday and reported a fine interest there with the best gatherings yet held. The interest here is deep enough but not wide enough, for there should be hundreds more of the intelligent farmers of this community take an interest in the work.

The change of the date of the Seed Fair is a decided improvement as was seen by the increased number of entries, and the general interest taken in it. The prize winners will be found below, the Judges being Mr Pearce, Seedsman, of London and Mr A. S. Hunter.

FRIDAY

Mr Pearce talked of "Tree planting for ornament and profit" and coming the same week as the great Forestry Conference at Ottawa, he and others were able to point to the opportunity of the subject. Some of the points he made we reproduce: money can provide barn, house, fences, etc. at any time, but money cannot buy ready made trees; you must plant them and wait. Farms increase in value by the tree outfit, advocated getting seedlings from the nursery, mulch with manure, sawdust not good if sheds rainfall and has no manurial qualities. Planting in the fall had many advantages. Evergreens should be planted same day and hour as deciduous, no getting life through the turpentine in the roots if sun and wind get at them. Select bush trees in fall, mark them, spade around, cutting the roots, and when you remove in spring the root will be a mass of fibres.

Roadside trees should be 40 feet apart, or plant maple and poplar 20 feet apart. Soft maples not good, if growth too rank cut back the top. Prune in the fall. In pruning always cut below just above a bud, if cut below there may be 8 to 12 inches of dead wood. Locust seedlings make good fence posts. He urged strongly to preserve their timber areas and keep every hoof out of them.

Mr Sherrington, of Walkerton, introduced the question of exemption of woodland from taxation, justified, for wood lots were of value to surrounding country. This gentleman came as a substitute for Mr Campbell, he is manager of the experimental station at his home and came to speak on "Co-operation in marketing of farm products," a subject nicely handled in January Horticulturist.

He distinguished between combine and co-operation; the latter had no sinister meaning in it. Farmers were too exclusive in their business, co-operation was needed, and interest in farm products should not cease till they were in satisfied consumer's hands.

There were about 15 co-operative associations in Ontario for the sale of apples. He described the modus operandi of these concerns, showed that honesty and mutual confidence must be the foundation, and economical buying and selling of fruit, barrels, boxes, etc the superstructure. In hauling apples use springs on the bolsters or pile the barrels on a rack full of hay. Careful cultivation, pruning spraying and marketing cannot fail to make orchards pay. He asserted that from 100,000 to 150,000 pounds (not dollars) were lost annually in Europe on Canadian apples owing to imperfect shipments. Denmark's product, were all sold on the co-operative plans in eggs alone they make about $1,000,000 a year.

He closed a most important address by an appeal for unity among farmers. Mr Pearce discussed the "Farmer's Lawn and Flower Garden" in the evening, to a large audience, with a few disorderly spirits, to whom the aesthetics of a fine lawn and garden did not appeal. He narrated how London had come to be a beautiful city by the force of example leading to a general lawn adornment. In this the home and the school should co-

Killed in the Bush.

Wm. Edwards, Traverston, meets death while loading logs.

Friday morning last Mr Will Edwards, Traverston, was engaged at his duties getting out logs to take to the mill and alone he met his death in the most tragic manner.

The first to discover him was Mr John W. McKechnie, who went to his place in the morning to look at some cattle. He stabled his horse, and went back to the bush to find him. He came in sight of the team standing at full length of the loading chain, and seeing no one gave a halloo, which of course was not answered. He kept on and made the gruesome discovery which shocked this neighborhood, deprived Glenelg of one of its most popular citizens, plunged his family into grief, and deprived a dear little three year old girl of a father's care.

He was loading logs in the usual way, well known to lumbermen, with his horse on the chain he had prepared to check the log with a handspike as soon as it struck the bunks, but the horse had gone too far, had upset the sleigh, the log coming right over, and he appeared to have slipped in some way, his head falling between the log and a stump and of course the life crushing out. This is a merciful feature of the case: he did not lie and die in agony alone. He had been dead some time when Mr McKechnie found him: only one thing to do run for help. Across the road he saw his brother the well known R. T. Edwards, he was at home conferring with a cattle buyer and with a neighbor who was near all were soon back in the bush and had to use the horses to move the log so as to liberate his head. The face was not at all mutilated.

He ceased was in his 44th year, a member of a large family. His wife died over three years ago, leaving an infant girl to his care. Besides this little tot, at present all unconscious of her loss, there remain as mourners, his aged mother and a sister who formed the home circle, R. T. across the road, Samuel at Banff, and we think, one other brother. His sisters are Mrs Thos Greenwood; Mrs Henry Moffat, Mrs Chas McClellan, Mrs D. McFarlane, Caledon, and the one at home.

The funeral took place on Sunday and as might be expected was very largely attended. His pastor Rev Mr Colling officiated and preached an impressive sermon from the words "We must needs all die." He referred to his personal intimacy with the deceased who was a faithful attendant on Divine services, a member of the choir and a respected and useful citizen.

Mr Edwards was a member of the I. O. F. of this town, and over 100 of his brethren turned out to pay the last respects. It was the largest society funeral ever held round this part. Six of the brethren acted as pall bearers, and on the coffin besides many other floral tributes was a beautiful wreath from the I. O. F. The impressive burial service was gone through with the reading parts being taken by Wm. Johnston, D. S. C. R., J. S. McIlraith, C. R., A. D. Browning, C. O., and all the members in turn dropped their sprigs of evergreen in the grave, before forming the Circle of Concord which closed the proceedings.

On page four will be found a tenderly sympathetic account from the pen of Mr W. L. Falkingham, a neighbor.

Underwear less than cost at Mockler's Red Letter Sale.

The Great West Life Insurance Company sells endowments and other policies at a lower rate than other companies. Ask for our rates before you insure. W. F. DUNN, Agent.

Great prices were realized last week at the Lawson Sale, a little to the north of us, the proprietor making $200 more than he had estimated from Auctioneer McKay's hammer.

A word in compliment of the fine weather is due from us. Few have seen a milder, more agreeable winter especially around Durham and to the east, for further west of us they had to take to the wheels. A fine soft snow has been falling for a couple of days which will make good sleighing and we may expect the cold to "strengthen as the days lengthen."

AFTER WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP.—A former Hanover lacrosse player, Noah Brusso, who then exhibited pugilistic tendencies, has blossomed out as the champion Canadian boxer and is slated to meet a Yankee named Hart for the heavy weight championship of the world next month. Some of these professionals may be quite respectable, but the better class of citizens look upon all with disapproval and we would much rather see him attempt to achieve fame in some more honorable calling than prize-fighting.

Stock Going up.

Director McKechnie informs us that today, Monday, Treas. Jackson attempted to purchase stock in Toronto, using the telephone, and was informed none could be had for less than 50c on the dollar, and broker's fees in addition. This would comfort to those who foolishly sacrificed their stock at 17c to 25c but is all right for the lucky purchasers. The papers say to day that amount 'did' is only 21, but record nothing as being "asked."

There can be no doubt the present buoyancy is due entirely to the agitation over the attempted removal of the mill on the cry of no marl, and if the report of the export is, as we expect it will be, favorable, the Annual meeting will take such action as will send the stock higher still.

Regrets are still heard that the mill was not kept running this particularly mild winter and the blame is freely laid on the head of the officials at the works rather than on the Directorate.

Mr McKechnie is receiving lots of proxies and no better disposition of them could be made than to entrust them to the one man on the Directorate who has most clearly been working in the interest of the shareholders.

No information has yet reached us of the date of the Annual meeting.

Word has come that Mr Farr is under medical treatment at his home, which explains his mysterious absence. We hope he may make rapid recovery.

Tenders are asked for the removal of frame stable from W. D. Mills' property in Upper Town to the Durham Cemetery. Tenders received up to 26th inst. J. P. TELFORD, Secy. Durham Cemetery Co.
