One of the saddest deaths that ever befell mortal man took place in this vicinity on Friday the 12th of Jan. Every one in this usually quiet neighborhood on this particular date appeared to be following their different avocations and every one appears to have been making the most of an exceptionally lovely day, when as a crack of thunder or a flash of lightning, the news spread, from house to house, from line to line, and from township to town that William Edwards had been killed in the woods, while in the act of loading his sleigh with logs.

The air seemed to be full of the message and as it widened and spread people stood rooted to the ground, wondering if what they heard could be true or if they were under some mystic spell Mr. G. In this sad state he was found by Mr John Mc-Kechnie, Upper Town, Durham. who had called to purchase a cow, and who after waiting a considerable time at the house, started off to the bush to see what was delaying Mr Edwards.

We learn that Miss Emma, sister of the deceased, wanted to go to hurry up her brother, but Mr McKechnie would not hear of it and went off himse,f.
