

Other Half of the Chameleon Wide Awake at Same Time.

To all appearances and according to the researches of those best capable of forming an opinion on the subject, the nervous centres in one lateral half of the chameleon go on independently of those on the other, and it has two lateral centres of perception—sensation and motion—besides the common one in which must reside the faculty of concentration.

Notwithstanding the strictly symmetrical structure of the chameleon as to its two halves, the eyes move independently of each other and convey separate impressions to their respective centres of perception. The consequence is that when the animal is agitated its movements resemble those of two animals, or, rather, perhaps, two halves of animals glued together.

Each half wishes to go its own way and there is no concordance of action. The chameleon, therefore, is the only four-legged vertebrate that is unable to swim.

When a chameleon is undisturbed every impulse of motion is referred to the proper tribunal and the whole organism acts in accordance with its desires. The chameleon, moreover, may be fast asleep on one side and wide awake on the other. Cautiously approached at night with a candle so as not to awaken the whole animal, the eye turned toward the light will open, begin to move, and the corresponding side will change color, whereas the other side will remain for a longer or shorter time in a torpid, motionless and unchanged state with its eye fast shut.

Dear Mother

Your little ones are a constant care in Fall and Winter weather. They will catch cold. Do you know about Shiloh's Consumption Cure, the Lung Tonic, and what it has done for so many? HOW TO KNOW THE HORSE YOU BUY.

Never have a horse brought out, or up, or down, to you, but go to the stall, and investigate for yourself certain details which, once you know them, require no special acumen to decide upon, or to be aware of. For instance, is there grain in the manger, and the hour of feeding some time ago? He may be a bad feeder, nervous delicate—well to call the veterinarian's attention to this point. Is the straw under his feet unusually trampled or broken? May be one of those irritable, nervous "weavers" (horses which constantly sway from side to side), who are generally also bad feeders and poor property.

Once out of the stall, notice that he submits quietly to being wiped over, and betrays no resentment, while harrying at accepting the bit, bridle, crupper, etc., and decorously permitting all necessary alterations and attentions. Accept no departure from absolute docility of deportment: for be sure that if the animal betrays either excitability, nervousness, or vice in the leader's hands he will be far worse with you, for you know you don't know, and he will know you don't know—and those combinations spell trouble. In the same way see him led out and put to the vehicle to which he is to be driven, noting each stage of the process, viewing him always with the keen critical eye of the individual who does not (yet) own him. Excuse nothing, and make no allowances for less. If he makes a move you don't fancy say so frankly, and look further—there are plenty of horses—F. M. Ware, in 'The Outing Magazine' for January.

The News in Rhyme.

"Battle-Axe," the "post-correspondent" of the Henderson (Neb.) Tribune, wrote his news in rhyme again last week. He said: Henry Jones last Friday night Got half-shot and had a fight. He was passed in the eye. He'll declare this is a lie; Herman Martin's feeling grim. For his teeth are on the bun. Tuesday he got Dentist Berge. Who plus teeth and also legs. Staying home is Grandpa Strode. Pollock met him on the road. Bailey Johnson bet on Pitt. Lost a dollar and six bits. Lost it all to Jerry Nance. Sad he'd like to kick Pitt's pants. Wilson went out last week. Rammed the parson good and meek; Parson then and there forgot. Said "that—gone—should be shot." Christmas to the very air. We expect to get our share. Grandma Fate checked in the bean. 'Twas a sight you should have seen. Dr. Belasco was near. Beans kept as a souvenir. Man here says that we write rot. He don't know an awful lot. One of those local, honest, straight, Looks to us like thirty 'nats. John Lin's dogs have got the mange. John's not caught it, which is strange. Those two bounds are cracker-jacks. Well, so long. Yours, Battle-Axe.

Elimination of the Superfluous Engages Attention of Critic.

An English writer has been devoting his attention to the elimination of unnecessary things, and has succeeded in presenting a tentative list of articles which mankind does not need. Like many other propagandists of a new cult to extremes in certain instances, but, on the whole, makes out a pretty good case. He holds to the belief that the modern city does not require a watch. He goes so far as to say that an umbrella, who never carries and cites Lord Beaconsfield, who never carried an umbrella, as an illustrious example. "When it rained he took refuge under the umbrella of the prettiest woman he could see."

The silk hat is tabooed by this iconoclast. In his inventory of superfluous things we find the flap that covers the keyhole of the front door, which often sadly interferes with the entrance of the belated, and perhaps bibulous, householder. "It is presumed from absolute facility by its power of occasional annoyance." He inquires as to the use of the tassel on the new umbrella. "Nobody in his senses wears a tassel on an umbrella."

Why are there two buttons, or even one on the sleeve of a coat? The writer took a census of his buttons, and found that sixty of them were unnecessary. He is particularly anxious as to the two buttons behind on a frock coat. Taking a survey of the whole human family, he finds that there are 500,000,000 buttons worn, all of them useless. No one has discovered the necessity for fourteen or sixteen pockets in men's clothes. This is the limit of superfluity.

STRONG WORDS BY A NEW YORK SPECIALIST.

"After years of testing and comparison I have no hesitation in saying that Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart is the quickest, safest, and surest known to medical science. I use it in my own practice. It relieves the most acute forms of heart ailment in less than thirty minutes and never fails."

A Mince Pie Story.

"Once when I was a reporter," said David Belasco at a holiday dinner, "I spent two days with a gang of tramps in order to get material for an article on 'tramp life.'"

"These tramps were a merry lot. They had as many stories to tell as the end man of a minstrel show. The excellent mince pie that we have just been eating reminds me of a mince pie episode told by one of the wanderers."

"He said that a friend of his, one cold day in January, knocked at the kitchen door of a farmhouse."

"Well," said the farmer's wife. "You here again?"

"Yes, ma'am," said the tramp respectfully. "I want to know, ma'am, if you'll be kind enough to give me the recipe for that mince pie what I had here yesterday."

"Well, the idea," cried the farmer's wife. "Land sakes, man, what do you want that recipe for?"

"To settle a bet," replied the tramp. "My partner says you use three cups of Portland cement to one of molasses, but I claim it's only two and a half."

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Robt. Bond of Bright's Disease.

His Doctor Who Said There Was No Hope for Him, Now Pronounces Him Well—He Tells His Own Story.

Mr. Brydges, Ont., Jan. 29.—(Special.)—Among the many people in this neighborhood who tell of the great work Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing, none is more emphatic than that old and respected citizen, Mr. Robert Bond, of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Bond says: "My attending physician said I was in the last stages of Bright's Disease and that there was no hope for me. Then I commenced to take Dodd's Kidney Pills and used in all twenty boxes. Now I eat well, sleep well, and my doctor says I am well. Dodd's Kidney Pills and nothing else cured me. Do you wonder I am always ready to say a good word for Dodd's Kidney Pills?"

White Pine About Exhausted.

There is food for natural reflection in the statement by a newspaper representative of the Michigan lumber interests that "to all intents and purposes there is no white pine here any more." The fact can hardly be ignored that the case presents an example of undiscriminating tariff policy. No intelligent protectionist will deny that the purpose of a protective tariff is to foster and increase the domestic production of the staple on which the duty is laid. No man with his eyes open can dispute that the effect of the tariff on lumber has been to hasten the destruction of the white pine forests. When forty years that duty has ended in wiping out what was the most important supply of lumber in this country the reason for continuing the obstacle against drawing on other countries for our lumber needs is hard to perceive.

Summer Colony of Doctors.

For the purpose of forming a colony of medical men a syndicate of twenty-five Manhattan and Brooklyn physicians, of which Dr. Henry Kane, of Brooklyn, is a prominent member, has purchased a tract of 7,000 acres of land near Yaphank, Suffolk county. Plans for its development include the erection of a hotel, a railroad station and many cottages. The tract is a part of the William Sidney Smith estate, known as Longwood. It is in the central section of Long Island, part of it heavily covered with timber. The cost of the land is more than $100,000.

Lord Rosebery.

There may be two opinions about Lord Rosebery's character as a politician, but there can only be one as to his occasional appearance in the capacity of a man of letters. In the domain of history and literature he touches nothing which he does not adorn and his range is a wide one—from the imperial capture of St. Helena to the inspired exclamation at Dumfries. His address: Dumfries some years ago on Burns was one of the most beautiful things that any Scotchman had ever heard.

TO RELIEVE CHOKING.

Doctors Say Time Lost May Mean Fatal Termination.

From the case of Mrs. Jennie Armstrong, who died from strangulation Saturday afternoon at 1724 North Charles street, where she was boarding, physicians say that all persons may well take a lesson.

When a person chokes, however slightly, they say, haste must be taken to dislodge the obstruction, but care should be exercised in the methods.

"When a person chokes at the table or elsewhere, a first aid, according to the report of the State Board of Health, should promptly stand up, as attempts to cough up the obstruction while sitting are liable to cause it to sink further down the windpipe."

"The seriousness of the choking depends upon the position of the lungs when the obstruction occurs. If they are inflated the pressure which the persons naturally exerts is likely to move the obstruction, but the serious cases where the lungs happen to be deflated, and the efforts at coughing carry the object farther down the windpipe."

"When a child is in a condition of this kind the best thing to do is to lift it up bodily by the feet, with the head hanging downward, and give a few violent jerks. This is almost certain to accomplish the desired result. In dealing with a grown person the remedy is the same. The patient should be laid on his back, and the head raised. The home is to grasp him around the waist and have him lean forward, so that his head will be as low as his feet, and then give violent shakes."

"The sight of a choking person is likely to excite those who see it. After the first emergency has been met, the sufferer begins to lose strength so rapidly that he cannot make further efforts the case seems to be hopeless. But even after breath has been entirely cut off and the person is helpless there is no need to despair of saving the life. Prompt and vigorous action, as long as the head is kept down and gravity is helping, may jolt out the obstruction."

"When the simple methods seem to fail no time should be lost in sending for a physician, or, preferably, a surgeon. Often lives have been saved at the last moment by the bold use of the knife. There is no time for anatomical or other preliminaries. The moment the larynx has been cut and an air passage opened the patient begins to breathe and regain strength."

"The story is told of Dr. L. McLane Tiffany, who was once about to operate on a young person to remove an unnatural growth from the nostrils, when the bit of flesh fell into the patient's windpipe. Without a moment's delay he cut through and removed the obstructions and made what was a remarkable operation."

"Once there was an old country doctor who was called in to a patient who was choking with a button. 'Do something quick,' all cried as he came in at the door. The patient was on the floor, on her hands and knees, straining to cough up the button. The doctor had on a big pair of boots. He swung back and gave her one kick, which sent the button flying in one direction and her in another."—Baltimore Sun.

HUMAN BODY UNSYMMETRICAL.

Fact Might Be Used to Make Identification Always Easy.

The symmetry of the human body though much dwelt on by writers and poets, is something which, according to a doctor, does not exist. This doctor, in discussing some phases of the New England "suit case murder" the other evening, said the entire opposite parts of the body is quite sufficient for purposes of identification, provided the differences have been observed. It is this fact, indeed, on which the Bertillon system is partly based. The right eye, for instance, is almost always higher than the left, but the difference is greater or less for each individual. Nails on different fingers always grow with different degrees of rapidly, in about fifty-four cases out of a hundred the left leg is shorter than the other. These variations hold good for every part of the body and the doctor's suggestion is that a record of them for each and every citizen, whether criminal or not, would always make identification easy.

CHICKEN FIGHTING IN MANILA.

Chicken fighting is a universal passion among the Filipinos and some of the cock pits here will seat 2,000 spectators. The great day for cock fighting is Sunday. The fighting begins immediately after early mass and continues all day. A great number of fights are pulled off each cock pit every Sunday, as a fight will last only a few minutes. The roosters are fitted with murderous steel gaffs and when one of the combatants gets in a good stroke that contest is over; one of the roosters is dead. Then two fresh roosters are placed in the pit, and this continues all day. Spectators pay a small admission charge and remain as long as they choose. The Americans tried to break up cock fighting, but the natives wouldn't stand for it, and there was so much indignation that it is now tolerated. I drove through one section of the poorer quarter at about 5:30 p.m., when the men were at home, and it seemed to me that in front of every house I saw a man or boy fondling a game rooster.

Guarding the Public Eyesight.

There is a controversy in England between the doctors and the opticians, who have been increasing their scientific equipment and prescribing at a much lower price than the optician, while general practitioners as a rule know little about optics and the prescription of glasses. It is a curious thing that there has been no organized crusade by the profession against allowing the public to select its own spectacles from the exposed stock, as has been the practice ever since glasses came into use in the seventeenth century, though this is obviously more injurious. But now that the opticians have undertaken to prescribe the doctors want that forbidden by an act of parliament, leaving the public free as before to choose their own spectacles. The opticians have prepared a counter bill providing for opticians' diplomas to be awarded by a central council of the whole trade.
