Lady Beauchamp, a very lovely woman, who is a sister of the Duke of Westminster, is a strong link between the Liberal party and our future Queen, for she is an intimate friend of the Princess of Wales. Mrs. Asquith-Then there's Mrs. Asquith. Few living Englishwomen of her age have been more written about than the clever and original wife of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman's most experienced Cabinet Minister. ## Easy Marks in the Four Hundred.

The motley crew of millionaires and social parasites which massed around Justice Deuel's disastrous legal boomerang throw a somewhat garish light on our American pseudo aristocracy-the socalled four hundred, whose daily life is chronicled in the newspapers and whose golden feasts and functions excite the gaping envy of the lowly. ## The Dread Disease Pneumonia, (Nebraska State Journal.) We spend time and money in fighting the white scourge and one of the important measures proposed for the lowa Legislature to act upon this winter is the founding of a State hospital for consumptives. Yet it is doubtful if this disease can lay claim to a larger number of victims than can pneumonia. In the presence of the rampant pneumococcus the physician is practically helpless. The question of recovery seems to be whether the patient is strong enough to bear the poison produced by the germ until that poison is strong enough to kill the germ itself. It is a duel to the death between patient and germ, and if the patient would win he must begin to train long before he has any suspicion that the struggle is coming. In other words, he must keep in good health.

CRAP SHOOTING SCHOOL.

The Number of Combinations Made by the Dice.

A corespondent writes to the editor of the New York Sun as follows: If your correspondent "M. S." wants to know the best school to go to in order to learn how one can get thirty-six combinations with a pair of dice, nothing will suit him better than our old friend experientia, who still docets at the old stand.

He can educate himself by taking two dice and laying them on separate pieces of paper, marked respectively A and B. He will then find that if he turns up the six on A he can turn up anything from one to six on B, giving him six different combinations to start with. He can then change the die on B again, giving him six combinations. As he can make six different starters on A and combine each with six different changes on B, he will probably be ready to admit that six times six equals thirty-six.

If he has at hand a separate sheet of paper on which to write down the total of each of these combinations as he forms them on A and B, he will see that none is less than two and none more than twelve, and that they are found to be divided in the following proportions:

Two can be thrown in one way; Three can be thrown in two ways; Four can be thrown in three ways; Five can be thrown in four ways; Six can be thrown in five ways; Seven can be thrown in four ways; Eight can be thrown in five ways; Nine can be thrown in four ways; Ten can be thrown in three ways; Eleven can be thrown in two ways; Twelve can be thrown in one way; Total combinations, thirty-six. By deducting from the total, thirty-six, the number of ways in which any number can come, we get the odds against that number being thrown. For instance, seven can come six ways out of the thirty-six, so there must be thirty ways that will not give six, and the odds against throwing a six must be thirty to six, or five to one. ---

A Religion to Live By.

Perhaps Messrs. Torrey and Alexander have left one important sermon unpreached The present duty of every man, woman and child is to live this life without reproach, and there is a gospel for this world that must not be overlooked in concern about the next. In conducting their whirlwind of revival here the evangelists complained that those already converted filed the pews so that those perhaps somewhat too readily classified as sinners could not gain admission. Many people of deeply religious nat-ures have haunted Massey Hall during the past fortnight, neglecting all else to revel in emotional, vocal and declared religion. It might have been well if a final meeting had been held, behind closed doors, for these. Through these people all the currents that have affected the community have passed, and not without telling on some of them. To these the evangelists might have given some admonition, reminding them that the home needs to be preserved as a place attractive to every member of the family; that true religion can make itself the cause of family discord; that exhortation is injudicious if it drives sons from the home; that a Christian in a hurry is about as ineffective as any other hastener; that if a person's religion does not make him or her more happy and cheerful, more companionable through life, a better wife and mother, a better husband and father, it is spurious and needs to be looked to. Perhapssome of those who were carried off their feet during the past fortnight should have placed back on their feet by the veangelists before they
