Red Letter Sale

People are wondering and inquiring "now can we sell the goods at the prices we do." We answer "we're overstocked." We bought too much, better to lose something now, and get the ready cash (which we can turn over and gain back what we have lost before next season) than to keep the goods.

MORE THAN HONORABLE. - An incident occurred last week which we cannot refrain from mentioning, though the hero of it we are sure would be the last man to sanction publicity. Mr Malcolm McInnes of the Gravel Road bought a horse for a good round sum at Commissioner Neil McCannel's sale, and by some mischance it died next day. Mr McCannel ealled on Mr Mc-Innes, and was assured that no blame was attached to him in the matter. Mr McCannel did not think so either, but insisted on bearing the loss, and handed back to Mr McInnes the note he had given at the sale. A transaction such as this quickens our faith in human nature.

MURDER ATTEMPTED .- Owen Sound had a sensation last week, almost ending in murder. A farmer on the way home at night with $150 in his pocket received for produce, was treacherously assaulted by a young man whom he had obligingly picked up. He wouldn't sit with the farmer, preferred to stand back in the wargon and at a lonely place on the road a shot went through the farmer's hat. The lad said it came from the outside and while Morrison, (the victim) was trying to manage his frightened horses another shot struck him in the face destroying his right eye, Blinded, he told the lad to run to a house for a light, still unsuspecting, but the lad had gone. Instead of being Kiln-dried, ground and wet again, it is to be treated in the wet, and the change as can be imagined will save a lot of coal, -- several tons a day, -- and not only so will require 7 or 8 fewer men to operate. This may not be good news to workmen, but it is certainly in the interests of shareholders.

Director McLaren is quite optimistic and thinks the saving in coal, wages, etc. will amount to about $30,000 a year.
