Death of Mrs John Simpson.

Forty nine years ago this summer, the writer's father moved the subject four sketch with her busband and ity. The choir contributed three anthems appropriate to the occasion, while Miss Alma Renwick gave a solo very pleasingly, in addition to the selections from the Hymnal by the whole congregation. Mr Robt Renwick gave an address upon Japan and the religion of the people, to whom the offerings at the close, would be given to the Japs' famine fund. He spoke briefly on the early Mission work among them as Pagans and idolators, and desaribed the religious beliefs as embodied in Shintoism, Buddhism, &c, the latter having many degrading teatures, no moral code and nothing to comfort.

In the choir contributed three and when one of the pock of the occasion, which was considered as great convenience in those days and the farmer having one was considered well off.
