In 1843 she married Isaac Pinkham, a builder and real estate operator, and their early married life was marked by prosperity and happiness. They had four children, three sons and a daughter.

In these good old fashioned days it was common for mothers to make their own home remedies from roots and herbs, nature's own remedies—calling in a physician only in specially urgent cases.

All this so far was done freely, without money and without price, as a labor of love.

At this point Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made known to the world. The three sons and the daughter, with Detroit despatch: At a late hour last night Mary Vollmer, about 20 years of age, who came from Galt, Ont., was found lying on the walk on Macomb street, in convulsions. She died before medical aid could reach her.

Attached to her body was a card asking that her brother, William G. Vollmer, be notified. The latter professes to know no reason why his sister should commit suicide. She visited him at the Union Trust building, where he is an engineer, at 9 o'clock last night and was cheerful and in good health.

It is believed that Miss Vollmer was frightened to death. Miss Vollmer was accosted on the street on Monday night, and slapped the man's face. He threatened to get even with her. It is thought that he may have intercepted her last night and threatened violence. Miss Vollmer had suffered from a weak heart for several years. Frigate may have overcome her and caused death.
