Additional Locals.

The final draft of C. L. A. districts bunches Durham with Mt Forest, Arthur and Grand Valley.

As a matter of fact newspaper men come into the possession of many secrets which would undoubtedly make "good reading," but which, for various reasons are never given to the public. Pity for those in trouble and sympathy for the afflicted plays a greater part in the suppression of news than the public imagines. Trust in a newspaper is seldom betrayed, but a spirit of defiance in refusing information naturally puts reporters on their mettle, and matters sometimes become public because of this, which would have gone no farther had the newspaper been taken into confidence.

WANTS TOO MUCH.—A delegation of officials of the G. T. R. have made proposals to Walkerton, as to a new station nearer the town. If Walkerton will provide right of way for track, station, sidings, etc., exempt the company for all time for expense for protection at road or street crossings, continue present taxation for 25 years, they will recommend that the change be made. Very generous. The town has replied courteously but firmly declining to accept the terms, as not being within their power in some respects and as being excessively exacting in others.

PLANETS IN CONJUNCTION.—One of the most interesting of celestial sights may be observed next Friday evening, the 11th inst. Jupiter and Venus, the two brightest of the planets and brighter than any of the fixed stars, appear close beside each other, being only one degree apart as they set that evening, on the north western horizon. Those wishing to observe them should look almost immediately after sunset, nearly straight west and their luminosity will easily distinguish them. Venus is the northern and brighter of the two, and will appear higher at sunset from the western horizon every night throughout the summer, widening the distance each succeeding evening between herself and Jupiter, which slowly creeps to the horizon. And yet another of our nearest neighbors may be found in the same position of the sky, the planet Mars, which is at present situated not far from these two, a little north and nearer the north-western horizon. She is now quite faint, being at her farthest distance from the earth, and at present is not to be compared in brightness with the two former. Careful observers may yet easily distinguish her about 15 minutes after sunset, if the western sky be clear. Try your eyesight and see if you can follow our planetary neighbors, although the latter two soon become invisible in the sun's rays.
