At first the disciples, thor oughly ashamed, were silent, but a li tle later they came and submitted the question to Him. Who is the greatest-Such is blind human nature; always desiring to be made prominent. A spirit of jealousy was probably creeping in they had seen Peter specially favored and Peter, James and John had lately been honored above the rest by being with Him in the mount. In the kingdon of heaven-They still view the kingdom of Christ as a temporal one, and the rea import of their question is, Whom do you expect to honor by giving the first place in your government?" What seductive dreams of greatness and glory arose before those Galilean fishermen as the nearest followers of the great King!" And yet the greatness of which they talked was small indeed when com pared with the greatness Jesus actually put upon them.

The self-seeking spirit leads to Satan's kingdom, not to Christ's; it is the spirit that leads downward instead of to heaven." Set him in the midst-Jesus then took the child in His arms (Mark ix. 36). This made the lesson very forcible. The little child was their teacher. "A child is priectly free from folly, and the mania for glory, and from envy and contentiousness, and all such passions."-Chrysostom.
