Funeral Services.

As the cold season is coming when discomfort is experienced and sometimes irritation produced through tedious delays at funerals the following suggestions as to the order of service may be helpful. It will be kept in mind that funerals are not properly public gatherings, but meetings of friends and acquaintances at the invitation of the bereaved. In this way for the hour of meeting and arrangements are under their control. Friends accepting the invitation come ready and willing to accommodate themselves to their wishes ready even to endure delay if the circumstances of the household demand it. On the other hand the mourners who have called their friends in their hour of sorrow will be most desirous that, if it all possible, nothing hinder the arrangements being carried out as announced. To help to guide both the mourners and the friends who sorrow with them, the following suggestions are offered:

1. Never have funeral notices printed till you have ascertained whether both minister and undertaker can attend at the time appointed. Some bitter disappointments have come through discovering too late that the minister or a wedding, a funeral or some engagement he could not set aside for that hour.

2. Remember that the hour at which the funeral will leave is always the hour when the services will begin. Friends are to be invited to help to bury but to join with the sorrowing in the funeral rites.

3. While leaving sorrowing friends their liberty it is well to remember that in the order followed at public funerals the first step in the leaving is the closing of the casket. In silence the friends as they come to the house look on the face of the dead then withdraw to their places but when the hour for the closing comes the last look is taken and the casket is closed.

4. The religious service which follows should neither be hurried nor tedious. Nothing should be said to harrow the feelings of the bereaved already overstrained but an appropriate reading of a few words in address or prayer that calm and encourage awakening faith and hope are always helpful. It is needless to say that the only way friends can help the sorrowing is by entering into the spirit of all the exercises. Sometimes the jarring note of conversation between parties all unconscious that they are heard, falls on the ear as a painful discord.

5. At the grave the duties of loving affection are discharged when the burial service is finished. Standing by while the sexton fills the grave serves no useful purpose and is a grave danger to the health of many.

If these suggestions were followed, especially if the friends view the fact of the dead prior to the religious service needless delays will be avoided and the whole service will become more sympathetic and reverent and above all everybody be in his place at the time appointed.

Blythe's Corners.

A very successful entertainment and box social financially at least was held in the Union School near Varney on Friday evening last. Inspector Campbell occupied the chair in his usual off-handed manner and called off a long list of a varied programme consisting of songs, by Miss Lizzie Pettigrew, singing by the children and recitations etc. Miss Pettigrew was warmly applauded for her singing and she was accompanied on the organ by Miss Lizzie Mellyride. The reciting by the children was very creditable and a flag drill by a number of school girls all in white, was excellent, but its pleasing features were greatly outtailed by its needless length. A large number of boxes were auctioned off by Auctioneer John Clark in quick order and most nearly have averaged $1.00, one box selling for 2.55. To be truthful in this write up we must say that the order was the worst we ever experienced and but for the prompt attempts of stamping it down by Mr Campbell it certainly would have become intolerable. A large number of puppies from Durham were present and for a time displayed great amount of ignorance by their behavior. The proceeds of the evening amounted to $42.00.

Mr Alex Dann of Marksville St. Joseph Island, is down on a visit to his sister Mrs Mellyride and other friends and acquaintance in Normanby.

Mr Alex Blythe has received another promotion lately and will too a time in the future reside in Belleville. By strict and careful attention to business Alex is climbing up.

Mr Wm Stewart arrived home from the West last week looking hale and hearty. The Tories can't blame the grits for bringing Willie home this time for his vote.

Mr Alex Dodds has had installed in his chopping mill a fine new chopper lately and is giving complete satisfaction to his many customers.

Mrs Samuel Caldwell was a welcome visitor at Mrs D. Mellyride last week.
