Games to Play.

A jolly stunt for an evening in the house is a family orchestra.

Choose one person to serve as conductor. Let everybody else sit around her in a circle, each one having agreed to imitate a certain instrument which he has chosen for himself—one a flute, another a violin, another a drum, etc.

The conductor raps with his baton (a cane or umbrella), and as he raises it for the start let every performer give out the first note of his imitation instrument.

Perhaps a measure or two of some familiar selection, like "Lohengrin," can be given in this way altogether. Then the conductor can call on this one and that one to give a solo part, and impose a fine upon him if he gives or breaks down.

This is great fun for a party. Mrs Kingsland describes the game of Bachelor's Kitchen, which sounds good.

All the players sit in a row, except one, who inquires of each person what he or she will give to furnish the bachelor's kitchen. Each one answers by naming some article that might find place in a kitchen—but no two may be alike.

The questioner then begins with the first player, and puts to him all sorts of questions, to which he may reply only by the repetition of the name of his contribution.

If, for example, one has given a pail, the questioner asks, "What did you wash your face in this morning? Answer, "A pail." "From what did you eat your breakfast? Answer, "A pail," etc.

The object is to make the players laugh, which subjects them to a forfeit, as does also the addition or subtraction of any word to their chosen answer.

Our able member Mr H H Miller M. P., is making himself felt at Ottawa. Already this session he has got several bouquets in the house and these things fairly well. It was no light honor to follow Mr. Fielding on the Liberal side in the budget discussion and thus have the first thrust at the opposition critic, Mr Geo E. Foster. Mr Miller would enjoy this last feature of it and it will surprise us if before the session is done he does not ruffle Mr Foster whose acts of late have made him vulnerable. Mr Miller is carrying into public life the enthusiasm that made his private business a success.
