Phoenixville, Pa., March 25 .- After vainly trying to pull his little master from in front of an approaching passenger train on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Cromby, this morning, a collie dog stood guard over the crushed and bleed ing form so faithfully that for a time it was impossible to render medical aid. The little victim was Paul, the 3-yearold son of Harry W. Elliottt, a prominent contractor of this place.

The child wandered from home, acompanied by the dog; strayed on the railroad tracks and cooed with delight as he waited for an approaching train to round a near-by curve. The child was seen by the engineer;

but the distance was too short to stop A physician among the passengers examined the little fellow after the dog had been driven away. His injuries consisted of a broken arm, rib and se-
