

TRIAL WILL COST OVER $300,000.

EXPENSES FALL MOST HEAVILY ON THAW FAMILY.

$500,000 is Their Share—Fees to Lawyers Alone Will Aggregate About $150,000 and Experts' Fees Also Come High.

New York, April 15.—It is eleven weeks since the trial of Harry K. Thaw for the murder of Stanford White began. All that time was not spent in the actual trial of the case, as there were several delays, but enough of it was so spent as to make it one of the longest criminal trials in this State.

What has this trial cost both the prosecution and the defendant? It is no easy matter to get accurate figures, but it is a pretty safe estimate to put the total at $300,000.

The heaviest outlay undoubtedly has been on Thaw and his family. Just how much they have spent may never be known accurately. Large sums will have to be paid to lawyers. There have been five of these lawyers actively engaged in the case since the firm of Black, Abbott, Gruber & Bonyage was dropped by Thaw. Of the lawyers, Delphin Michael Delmas will get the biggest fee. He isn't naming the fee he agreed to accept, but it is said by the other lawyers to be $50,000. It is surely not less than that.

What the other lawyers will get is a problem. One of them is going to ask for $15,000. It is said that to another $16,000 has already been paid. It is not expected that any of them will get less than $15,000. Before the Black firm was let out by Thaw it is said to have retained lawyers cannot run much under $150,000.

All through the trial there were four medical experts for the defence and four for the prosecution. Near the end of the trial four more were called in. The experts do not come very low, especially for the defence. If the experts between them do not get about $30,000 they have reduced their rates. There has been no public announcement to that effect. In addition David N. Carvalho, the handwriting expert, has attended every session of the trial. It has not been easy to understand just what he did for Thaw, but there must have been some reason for his presence, and his fee will probably be a fat one.

Will Cost Thaw $250,000.

In every important criminal case there is an amount of investigation and outside work which is not generally realized by the public. Witnesses must be looked up. Stories come from cranks and other misguided persons, but they must all be looked up. It might be fatal to pass any of them without scrutiny. It would at least be dangerous. To get at the bottom of the stories requires patient work and experienced men to do it. They have got to be paid. Sometimes money must be handed out to persons who have something to tell before they give up. This piles up the contingent expense account.

From the time Stanford White was killed Roger O'Mara, a former police chief of Pittsburgh, has been in the employ of the Thaws. He has had men doing sleuthing between here and Pittsburgh and other parts of the country. The bill for this source alone will not be a small one.

There are other incidental expenses which have to be met. The typewriting bills made a good-sized item. When the whole thing is summed up if the expenses of the trial are less than $50,000 it will surprise persons who are conversant with that sort of thing. A conservative estimate of the whole thing would seem to be that before the Thaws have to be that before the Thaws have paid out more than $225,000.

Expense to Taxpayers.

The cost to the taxpayers will not be so great. There are several explanations for this. The principal one is that in this county there is a machine for prosecuting criminals which is always in motion. It is a well-oiled machine, and can be started on any individual case at a moment's notice. Its engineers are men who get yearly salaries, and the additional expense comes when outside aid is called in.

The Thaw trial has cost the county to date not much more than $25,000. This, of course, does not include salaries for officials. It is the sum that has been spent outside and includes the fees for the medical experts. It is a matter of record that the experts for the prosecution do not get as much as those called by the defence. There is a reason for this. There is much steady business from the District Attorney's office all the year round, and the experts know that it is good to be on the side of the prosecution.

Total Cost About $300,000.

It is a difficult matter to figure out the running expenses of a court. A man who is familiar with the salaries of court officials, including the judge, the district attorney, his assistants, court officers, stenographers, clerk and others connected with the court machinery has figured out that the daily cost for each court session is about $700. Counting five days for each of the eleven weeks—for the salaries go on even if there is no session, and Mr. Justice Fitzgerald's court has done no other business since the trial started—the court expenses alone have been close to $400,000. Add to that the salaries of a squad of policemen who have been stationed each day outside of the court-room to stand off the curious and you have another neat sum. Taking all these things into consideration, it is not hard to understand that $300,000 for the entire cost of the trial seems more like an underestimate than an overestimate.

KAISER LOSSES LAWSUIT.

Fails to Eject Undesirable Tenant From a Hotel.

Berlin, April 15.—The Kaiser has lost a lawsuit against one of his tenants in the court at Rosenberg. The Kaiser Hotel was leased to a man named Kalweit, in 1907. Now, on the ground of "sundry grievances," including charges of personal drunkenness and allowing disturbances on the premises, the chief court official applied for the eviction of the tenant.

It was shown in the course of the hearing that Kalweit had a liquor license, but this was not one of the complaints, the local authorities not having enforced a license law. The Emperor's property was above the law.

The long hearing ended by the court finding in favor of the defendant, who, presumably, will remain the tenant of the hotel.

M. C. R. CONDUCTORS OFF.

Charged by Spotter With "Knocking Down" Railway Fares.

St. Thomas despatch: Two Michigan Central conductors here have been released from duty, and others are in trouble as a result of reports made by a spotter who rode on trains as a traveller. His charge that fares paid by him were "knocked down" by the conductors is denied by the latter, who save his reports are light-colored and trifling matters, grossly exaggerated. The Brotherhood will take up the case for the men, who have been on the road for years.

Y., April 15.—At 10 o'clock to-night a man, who was dressed in underwear or very light clothing, was seen to jump from the bridge between the mainland and Green Island into the rapids. He was swept over the American Falls. The locality was searched, but nothing was found. Nightwatchman Hayward and his son were on duty at the time. He appeared to be a man six feet tall, with dark moustache.

"Haunted by furies, I am chasing myself from place to place, and can find no rest anywhere." This sentence was found written in the notebook taken from the man. The suicide left behind him also a note asking forgiveness for his deed, and saying that he had an incurable ailment that he feared to be dependent upon his friends.

While at the hotel Teskey claimed to have relatives at St. Mary's, Ont.

THEATRE SCENE OF SHOOTING.

Actress Sang While Wealthy Pittsburger Shot Himself.

Pittsburg, April 15.—With her arms outstretched toward a tier of boxes in the Grand Opera House at 3:20 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Ethel Levy, divorced wife of George M. Cohen, started singing the chorus of "Unrequited Love"; at the same time Robert M. Crow, 25 years of age, a stockholder and officer in several banks, including the Union Trust Company, owned by H. C. Frick, arose in a box, drew a revolver and shot himself through the stomach. The house was crowded to its capacity, the majority being women. Without missing a note, Miss Levy finished her song, and as Crow turned back over and almost fell out of the box, the audience thought the shooting was part of Miss Levy's act.

They applauded her singing, and when officers picked up the dying man it became known instead of being part of the show, a tragedy had taken place before their eyes. There was a panic then, and despite the singing of Miss Levy, women battled to get out, and a number received slight hurts. The display of nerve by Miss Levy was almost remarkable. While singing she saw Crow draw the revolver, rise out of his chair and fire the fatal shot, yet she continued her act.

Crow was an intimate friend of Harry K. Thaw. His relatives declare that the Thaw testimony aggravated an ailment from which he had been suffering for years. It is believed the address of Jerome, part of which was in an afternoon paper found in Crow's pocket, caused him to entirely lose his reason and make the attempt on his life.

The People on the Immigrant Cars Were Cooking Their Dinner—The Debris Took Fire and Men Pinned Beneath It Could Not Be Rescued, and Were Burned to Death.

Chapleau despatch: A terrible disaster by which the westbound Imperial Limited was wrecked and fifteen persons, chiefly English immigrants, were either killed or burned to death, took place twenty-two miles west of here at noon yesterday. The train was running at a little over twenty miles an hour and was rounding a curve when the baggage car a rail broke. The car left the rails, was torn away from the engine and mail car ahead, and plunged down the embankment to a small ice-covered lake. It was followed by two immigrant cars. The cars and a first-class coach crashed into each other at the bottom of the bank. The immigrant cars were crowded with people who were engaged in cooking dinner. The acetylene lights were also burning. From these two sources flames spread through the debris with incredible rapidity. The wounded, seeing the flames approaching, cried out piteously for help. Many of them were pinned down beneath the wreckage.

LOST HIS PULPIT.

YOUNG CLERGYMAN'S EXPERIENCE IN NEW YORK.

New York, April 15.—Rev. W. Howard Mears, a young Episcopalian clergyman, who sought to imitate the celebrated example of Dr. Parkhurst in slandering the Tenderloin, has been deposed by Bishop Greer after an investigation by a committee of his conduct. Mr. Mears, who is 32 years old and was the assistant rector of St. Matthew's Church, was arrested on the night of March 12, after a first fight with two plain clothes detectives who had followed him into a den of thieves in Seventh avenue.

There were two negroes in the room with the clergyman and the detectives, who had their ears glued to the windows, heard the clergyman say that he did not propose to be robbed, and that he was to be let out. At that point the detectives rushed in and told him he was under arrest. The clergyman fought off the sleuths with a chair and gave one of them a black eye. He mistook them for accomplices of the women. The minister was arrested ten minutes later in the street, and when arraigned in the police court he said: "I am a student of sociology and in the pursuit of my work I went through the Tenderloin to gather material for a sermon."

He apparently got the material he was looking for, but the sermon was never delivered. The committee which passed upon the charges was composed of such men as ex-Mayor Seth Low and Francis Lynde Stetson.

He was not the type of man to parade his misfortune, but the fact was that the late Speaker was hard hit by fortune on more than one occasion.

PEARY WILL START IN JUNE—EXPENSES NOT YET RAISED.

New York, April 15.—Commander Robert E. Peary, it was announced today, will start in June on his sixth trip to the Arctic.

His plans are all made contingent on his raising the necessary funds which, however, his friends are confident he will secure.

Captain Robert Bartlett, of St. Johns, N. F., the sailing master of the Roosevelt in her last northward trip, has been notified by telegram to come here in May to begin the fitting out of the Roosevelt.

Commander Peary will personally select his own crew this time, to avoid any repetition of dissatisfaction of the sailors who went north in the 1903-04 trip. Only picked men will be taken along.

Roy Marvin, a naturalist, and Dr. Louis Wolff, as surgeon, are to accompany the explorer as members of his staff.

Peary will stick to the American route in his effort to reach the pole. He will not use balloons or automobiles, but will adhere to his original policy of depending upon sledges, dogs and Eskimos.

The Roosevelt is at Shooter Island, being fitted with new boilers, and is receiving general repairs. She will be ready May 20th.

Freak of the Atlantic.

(Boston Herald.)

No one would call the Atlantic Ocean a "conquering" sea, but those who "cross the pond" for pleasure or business find it very peculiarly capricious. You never can tell when the Atlantic will treat you. Terrible storms have marked this winter's voyage, and the Devonian sailed a summer ago, knowing nothing of the Arctic perils we have seen. The most remarkable winter trip ever taken by the officers on that line, for it might have been June or August, with the messengers playing games on the decks and until this icebound coast loomed in sight the liner realize it was January and not July.
