During the quarter our lessons have led us into four lands: I. Canaan, where Isaac lived, from which Jacob fled, where Joseph was sold. 2. Mesopotamia, where Jacob fled, 3. Practical Applications. Three names stand out prominently the lessons of this quarter, and from their characters and acts some practical truths may be drawn. I. Jacob. 1. A warning. The condition of Jacob on this journey was brought about by his selfish and deceit-Isaac sends Jacob to Haran to obtain | ful conduct toward his brother. Thus God demight have dreamed the same dreams livers his people from the power of and told them as freely as Joseph did, and innocent to be unfavorably affected by them. Men vary in sincerity naturally, but the impartation of divine grace will make us all sincere. 2. Patience. The conditions of life that Satan imposes ipon us with a view to our destruction will, through the power of divine grace according to our faith, work in us a degree of patience that will qualify us for life's activities. 3. Honor. It was not Judah nor Simeon that attained to honor in Pharaoh's court, but it was Joseph, their victim. The character that Joseph possessed would bring honor to him anywhere. Those who seek honor among men fail to secure the honor that cometh from God only. Those who ionor God with their thoughts, their words and their acts will receive honor from Him. Joseph took the course he did, not to secure the honor that came

III. Moses. 1. Preservation. From first to last Moses was the man of the hour. It would be idle to attribute his being kept alive to accident. God's providence set a train of events in action her former friends. The leading people Joseph cast into prison, B. C., 1719. Pharaoh had one thing in mind in the training of Moses, but God had a very different one. 2. Choice. He chose "rather to suffer affliction ... than to enjoy the pleasures of sin." We have inducements presented to us again and again to be identified with the world. We have to choose between the reproach of Christ and the pleasures of sin, between the joys of salvation and the empty joys of earth, between the riches of God's grace and the uncertain riches of this world. We are encouraged by the choice that Moses made to make a similar one. 3. Discipline. The choice was immediately followed by forty years of discipline.
