> "The unrest in India is talked about everywhere, and is the cause of much anxiety, however much Britishers may whistle to keep up courage. It is another phase of the new life that is stirring in all the East, India for the Indians,' 'China for the Chinese,' and 'Japan for the Japanese.' No people of three hundred millions wants foreign domination. Great Britain is educating India away from the colonial up to the independent state, and it ought to be said that Britain is doing it magnanimously and honorably. No other nation has such a colonial record as that Britain in India, and if it should mean by only an independent India, educated to self-government, so much the better for the world, and so much more honor to the nation that has brought it to

"The world's best interests would be served to-day by a vigorous Christian propaganda in the East. Without it what may happen in a few years if material developments go on at this pace? In the interests of the West, as well as the East, to-day, if ever, missions should be pushed. Probably a dozen years now may mean more than a hun-
