Mission Life in India.

On Sunday the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church was occupied morning and evening by the Rev. F. H. Russell, of Dhar Central India. In the morning he dealt with the work that is being done in educating the work and evangelizing. He gave striking illustrations from experience among the Hindus. of the liberalizing effects of Education both within and without the circle of mission work. The medical work he held was not to be valued as a mere agent of evangelizing or proselytizing, but as a direct expression of our Christianity. At the same time he told a touching tale of how the way was opened to the hearts of a whole village through a marvellous case of a poor suffering boy cured at their hospital. The agency on which he more than all relied for the up-lifting of India however was the gospel message which needed to be imported through living exemplars rather than through any system of dogmatic teaching.

MODERN PROBLEMS.

In the evening he dealt with some of the issues arising in the modern development of the Hindoo life. The political unrest of which we hear so much he regarded less as a movement against British rule than as an indication of a new spirit that is awakening in India. Everywhere the dissatisfaction with either the political bonds or the social restrictions of caste is an indication that there is being born the consciousness of personality and the sense of individuality. It is the manifestation not merely of a new life, but of a new concept of the relation of things. Thus there is the craving for knowledge, the ambition to acquire practical skill in every day activity, the aspiration for power and the reaching after a new religion and philosophic outlook.

INDUSTRIAL LIFE.

From an interview with Mr. Russell we learned that part of the work of the mission is to teach the boys and girls how to make their labor of greater market value. To this end they are taught to build houses, gardens and many other things. So they advance getting a practical training in many lines of work till the completion of their four year course their wages are increased from a day's work. The tension of a missionary's life may be imagined when it is known that Mr. Russell superintends the shops, is architect for the houses built, as well as ardent and zealous missionary.

PEACH ROWING.

When asked as to how far they had succeeded in cultivating our fruits he said he had so far done nothing with apples but that he had had success in cultivating peaches. The difficulty in securing a crop was not in growing the tree but in getting it to bear. Those who have watched the peach will have noticed that first comes the blossom, then follows the leaf. But when the leaves are evergreen there is no collection of strength to develop the fruit buds, and hence there was no blossom. To remedy this he experimented by stripping off the leaves at the proper season. As in town Friday, leaving two of his children at Mr. John Snell's as Mrs. C. I. undergoing an operation in Guelph hospital.

Another of those attractive Library Concerts is to be given on Thursday evening of next week, 23rd inst. Watch for programs. An excellent entertainment, musical and otherwise is assured. Same low rates.

Their entertainments are not to be classed with 'shows', but are of a high and instructive order.—Prescott Daily Herald.—Referring to the performance of the great Scottish comedian which appears in the Town Hall on 20 January, under auspices of Ben Nevis Camp.

The law does not protect from the incompetent optician, but you can successfully defend yourself by patronizing those skilled in this profession, Chas. J. Western, eyesight specialist of Toronto will be in Darling's Drug Store on Thursday, Jan. 23rd. Do not fail to consult him.

Mr. Gavin Spruce is a host in himself of very versatile acquirements, and a king among Scottish entertainers. His introductory address outlining the history of the Scottish people, their trials and sufferings, their successful efforts to preserve their independence, and the development of their national muse and literature, was replete with a wealth of word painting, as rare, as it is delightful to listen to. He also added materially to the interest in his songs that were so well interpreted by Miss Strachan and himself by commenting upon their origin and purpose. His dry and pawky humor was most infectious, and his anecdotes recounted in a manner peculiar to himself, kept the large audience in a constant state of merriment. The company are entering upon an extensive tour throughout Canada and we unhesitatingly advise all those who are interested in the songs and stories of Auld Scotland, and who are not? to on no account fail to hear the Gavin Spruce Company.—The News, Alexandria, Gueugary Co., Ont., Oct. 25, 1907.—Appearing with other talented artists in the Town Hall on Wednesday, 20 January, under auspices of Ben Nevis Camp.

McKINNON-CLAYTON

A very pretty wedding took place in St. George's church, Lambton, on Tuesday last, at 2 p.m., when the marriage was solemnized by Miss Mabel Clayton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Clayton, and Mr. John A. McKinnon, teacher, and well known in Durham and vicinity. The church was beautifully decorated with Christmas greens and holly, and a magnificent marriage Rey. H. O. Tremayne, former rector of St. George's.

The bride who was given away by her father, was attended by her sister, Miss Irene, while the groom was supported by Mr. N. R. Winter of Toronto Junction. The bride was attired in a handsome gown of embroidered blue silk, with trimmings of duchesse satin, and made "en train," and wore a picture hat of lace and plumes and a shower bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaid was beautifully gowned in a handsome dress of just and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. During the signing of the register Miss Frankie Winter sang "O Sweet and Holy."

After the ceremony a reception at a an elaborate wedding luncheon was given at "Elmans," the home of the bride's parents. About 75 guests attending room were both prettily bedecked with ferns and carnations and smiles. Among the gifts to the bride, which consisted of a lavish array of cut glass and silver, was a gift of cut glass dishes from the St. George's church choir of which the bride had been organist. Mr. and Mrs. McKinnon left immediately for New York for a short honeymoon trip. The bride's travelling gown was a smartly tailored suit of green broadcloth with hat to match, trimmed with mink, and a set of mink trowsers, the gift of the groom.

Ontario Blended Flour Better.

In the old days, when practically all our farmers planted wheat as their principal crop and our local millers were grinding this wheat into good Ontario flour, bran and shorts sold about half what they do now. These millers had plenty of time to mill. When Manitoba flour pushed its way into Ontario, our farmers saw only the "big patent flour, stopped raising wheat, and made the Manitoba farmer rich. Naturally our millers had little wheat to grind. Bran and shorts had to be brought from the West. Freight rates were, and are, high. And our stockmen and dairymen, and farmers, too, are paying for this folly.

The remedy lies with the farmers. They should refuse to buy Western flour at any price. The blended flour, milled right here in our own province, of Ontario wheat and a little Manitoba wheat, are better—both for bread and pastry—than any Western hard patent flour. By raising more wheat, and buying blended flour made of this same wheat, our great farming population would not only keep their money at home but also keep our flour mills busy grinding wheat. With plenty of wheat to grind, there would be plenty of bran and shorts for sale. And big quantities mean lower prices.

This does not mean any banishment on the part of the farmer. As a matter of fact, when he buys blended flour, he will be getting a better flour than he has ever bought before. Those Ontario blended flours contain Ontario wheat and a small quantity of Manitoba wheat. Ontario flour, while perfect for cake and pastry, does not contain enough "strength" (or gluten, as the chemists call it) to make a big loaf of bread. Now, our millers have found out just how much gluten Ontario wheat needs, and they add the gluten by adding a little Manitoba flour, which is high in gluten. So, in these Ontario blended flours we get both a bread flour and a pastry flour, and the best of each kind.

Certainly, when our farmers can get a better flour, and at the same time create a new market for Ontario wheat or restore wheat growing to its former favor among our agricultural population, there seems no reason in the world why every farmer in Ontario should not use Ontario blended flour.

Dr. Burt, of Owen Sound, will not visit this month. He is spending a few weeks visiting the New York hospitals in connection with his special work. McKinnon 100 acre farm at the Rocky. Immediate possession given. For further particulars apply to J. P. TELFORD, Durham Nov. 5th 1907.
