

OLD FIREMA MEETS DEATH.

New York's Deputy Chief Killed in Cellar.

Fell Through a Trap Door to His Death.

New York, Feb. 17.—Deputy Chief Charles W. Kruger, known for many years as "The Grand Old Man of the Fire Department," lost his life today while leading his men in a desperate fight against flames in Canal street. While working his way cautiously through a cellar filled with smoke and gas, Kruger plunged through a trap door into a sub-basement filled with water. He was dead when taken out, but in the few minutes which elapsed between the time the old man fell and his body was drawn out, more than a score of men had risked their own lives in an effort to save that of their leader.

"I knew it would happen this way," said one of Kruger's men when the chief's body was being carried away. "I have been to many fires with him. He was always in the lead. He never said, 'Boys, get into that place, or that place.' He always led himself. He said, 'Boys, follow me,' and that's just what he did this time, when he led us into that basement."

Kruger was 57 years old, and had been a member of the department for 36 years. Several years ago Kruger was acting chief of the department for a time while Chief Croker was temporarily under suspension.

The Baker-Jones Printing Co. suffered loss of $80,000, and the S. H. Thompson Paper Co. $10,000.

The fire in which the old deputy chief lost his life started at 217 Canal street, and before it had been subdued swept that building from basement to roof, spread to two adjoining buildings, routed the tenants from several surrounding tenement houses, and threatened the Church of the Most Precious Blood, in Baxter street. It was after the flames in the upper part of the building had been brought under control that Kruger took his men to the basement. A great pile of excelsior in bales was blazing furiously, and attempts to reach it with streams from the street had been unsuccessful. After several attempts to get at the fire from the outside Kruger asked permission of Chief Croker to take his men through the basement of 215 and cut a hole through the wall to 217, where the fire was burning. Croker consented and with a dozen men behind him, Kruger plunged into the cellar. The place was filled with smoke, and the deadly fumes of illuminating gas, which flowed from broken or melted pipes, but the men pressed cautiously forward into the darkness. Just in the middle of the cellar Kruger stepped over a trap and plunged into six feet of water in the sub-basement.

Then began a desperate fight in the gas-filled cellar to help himself, and when Battalion Chief Galvin plunged into the dark hole and raised the old man's head above the surface he was unconscious. He required the combined efforts of twenty firemen to get him out, as they were by breathing smoke and gas, to draw Galvin, who still clung to Kruger's body, from the pit.

The property loss, as a result of the fire, is placed at $50,000.

HUNGRY CHILDREN

Down New York Police in Rush for Food.

New York, Feb. 17.—Fifteen hundred children from the Ghetto schools had things all their own way this noon in an attempt to take advantage of the free lunch offer made by Adolf Lorber, who keeps a big restaurant in Grand street. Brushing aside the policemen stationed to maintain order, the children swept up to the doorway when the order came to admit them, and before they were seated they smashed a plate and glass window and caused a panic in the part of the dining rooms reserved for regular customers.

Lorber's sympathies were aroused when reports were made that many of the east side children went unfed to school, and on Monday he threw open the third and fourth floors of his restaurant and provided a substantial lunch for Jewish and Gentile child alike. Several hundred boys and girls were on hand on Monday.

Since then the news that free lunches could be obtained at Lorber's spread throughout the east side, and when many schools were closed during the noon recess 1,500 pupils went to the restaurant.

The ground floor was well filled with diners when the children began to swarm against the doors. The three policemen stationed there could do nothing, and reserves had to be sent for. Before they arrived a big plate glass window was smashed, and when the riot was put down the children were fed as they had been promised.
