The C. P. R. trains have started to draw cement from the Brant lakes to the Durham Cement factory. So far it has been all outlay on this line but now the revenue will be coming in. Speaking of cement, these Brant lakes have saved the situation for the Durham factory. When this factory was first started, we were told that there was enough marl in Durham to last a hundred years. Instead of that it hasn't lasted ten, and had it not been for the Brant lakes and the C. P. R., as we have said, been forced to go out of business. And if Dan Knechtel and the men who are associated with him in the Falconer cement factory had only been a little swifter, Durham would have been cut out anyway. What the Hanover cement men should have done was to have bought all the lakes in sight instead of being content with two or three of them. But Dr. Jamieson was too swift for them, and managed to get a few of what was going in the way of cement lakes. And so Durham will get plenty of marl, while Dr. Jamieson will get a royalty of 2c a barrel. The Durham factory consumes 1200 barrels of marl a day. This means $24 a day for Dr. Jamieson or a little over $7,000 a year leaving out Sundays. In the course of 25 years or so, at that rate, Dr. Jamieson ought to be able to retire from business.—Walkerton Telescope.
