We regret to report the death of Mrs. L. McNaughton on Thursday morning last.

George Nichol is helping Walter Geddes with the hay.

Mr. Irwin Henderson and Miss Rebecca Park attended Endeavor at Knox Sunday evening.

The Guild had a very small attendance Tuesday evening, only a baker's dozen being present.

Those who attended the dance at John Thompson's say it was a good one.

Mr. and Mrs. David Marshall of Knox Corners visited Mr and Mrs. L. Marshall on Sunday.

Mr Alex Anderson purchased another horse on Monday. Look out girls.

Our baseball boys are beginning to think they are champions since they licked Ayton and Poplar Hill.

We congratulate Mr. Norman Anderson on taking honors at the recent Entrance examinations.

Edge Hill.

Everyone in this neighborhood is busy with the having at present. It is an excellent crop in this locality this season.

Mrs. Jas Staples, Markdale, visited at her son Fred's here last week.

Miss Ethel Trafford, of Allan Park, is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs Fred Staples.

A couple small typographical errors crept into our budget lately. Two weeks ago we reported our teacher re-engaged; Miss Wardrow, the name should have read; last week we mentioned Miss Burgess going to live in Southampton. This part of fault should read "with her nephew" instead of "with his nephew" as was published.

Mrs. McArthur, of Bunesan, was visiting her daughter, Mrs. Jos Firth, at the Post Office last week.

Mrs. Houtby, of London, is a guest of her sister, Mrs Jos Firth.

Mr Cranston and a lady friend of Toronto visited at Mr. Dan Edge's for a few days last week.

Mr and Mrs Donpe and Wm. Seaman spent Monday at Listowel.

Quite a large number of the Christian Endeavor took in the Convention in Harriston last week.

Mrs John Orchard is visiting in London.

Rev. Mr and Mrs Little are expected home this week.

Hopeville.

Intended for last week. Wm Barnett has been to Toronto with one of his boys that he left in the hospital, having sore eyes.

Lightning struck the barn of Mr Alex Hlaw last week, shattering it bad, and we hear Archibald McMillan had two cattle killed.

Miss Edith Glenister, of Toronto, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs Dingwall, Sr. She is accompanied by a friend, Mrs Elizabeth Glenister, also of Toronto.

The Presbyterian church Sunday School Picnic on 17th.

On Saturday evening, 11th, the Swinton Park football team came here to play with a new team got up in Proton lately. They gathered in the village near the hotel and let the ball loose in the street and worked their way towards a field of John Dezell's. Sometimes the ball would strike a house, then again into some garden, then two or more would run, jump on the fence and break down any garden stuff that was in their way. There was three of them on a good wire fence going over into a garden, when the owner of the garden was working inside unseen. He ordered them off his fence or he would use a club on them. They soon got down and the owner of their ball and cautioned them out their ball and brought them out their ball and cautioned them against jumping on an expensive wire fence. They got to the field and had some smart playing, the score being two games for Swinton Park.

David Bilton, his wife and child, also Peter McArthur, has had a trip away to Bell's Lake up north for two days fishing. They came home Saturday evening last. They say they did well and have some big fish stories to tell and there are people here who will believe them. They all went in Bilton's automobile.

Dromore.

Having is the order of the day around our burg at present. Pretty good crop this year.

A number of our young folks spent a pleasant time last Wednesday night rowing in the moonlight on Hamilton's Lake.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor Review:—

About this time of year it often happens that the butter maker loses some butter in the butter milk. The following is taken from the "New York Times" and ought to explain matters some. This is written for creamery practice but with slight variation will suit the farm dairy.

Question 265 reads: "What are the essentials in order to secure an exhaustive churning? How does your butter milk usually test? and we have the following interesting answer:

H G Hawthorne, Pennsylvania.—The essentials in order to secure an exhaustive churning are many and varied and no rule can be given that will apply equally to all seasons and to all creameries.

1. Correct churning temperature is, to my mind the most important factor. The temperature should be low enough, so that the granules will form to about the size of wheat kernels in from 30 to 40 minutes. Care must be taken that the finishing temperature is not too high. The buttermaker must be sure that the cream is of low enough temperature at starting so that during very hot weather it will not be of too high temperature at finishing. If the temperature of the room cannot be controlled it is a good plan to put ice water in the churn and revolve for a few minutes before putting in the cream. This will cool the churn so that the cream will not warm up and will help to secure an exhaustive churning.

2. Proper ripening. The cream should not be of too low acidity. In order to churn satisfactorily cream should not contain less than 1 per cent acidity nor more than .6 per cent. The cream should be frequently and thoroughly stirred during the ripening process. A ripener agitator is considered the best, but as all haven't it, pots must be taken that it is stirred often enough to ripen evenly. Cream should not be ripened in two vats and mixed just before churning. If it is necessary to ripen in different vats, it should be churned separately or mixed at least an hour before churning, stirring at frequent intervals. A good starter helps to secure proper ripening, especially if the cows are late in the period of lactation.

Sufficient cooling of cream. It should be cooled in the churning temperature for at least 3 hours before churning. 3. Quantity of cream in the churn. In the flush of the season it is often a temptation to fill the churn too full rather than make two churning. This usually necessitates a too high churning temperature and leads to cause a loss of fat in the buttermilk. The churn should not be filled much over one third full. 4. Construction of churn. The churn should be so constructed as to give an even amount of agitation to all the cream contained in it.

5. Correct thickness of cream. Between 30 and 35 per cent is about the right thickness to churn satisfactorily. 6. Construction of churn. The churn should be so constructed as to give an even amount of agitation to all the cream contained in it.

7. Period of lactation and feed. These have a bearing on the creamability of cream. When the cream is from cows late in the period of lactation or from cows fed exclusively on dry fodder, it is more viscous and hence more difficult to churn satisfactorily.

My buttermilk tests between .1 and .2 per cent usually. It should not test over .1 per cent.

Obituary

Again we are called upon, as we have had on several occasions during the last few years, to chronicle another death of a member of the MacIntyre family. South line, Gleneg, in the person of Miss Katie MacIntyre, who departed this life on Monday morning, the 6th inst., after several months illness from cancer of the liver, at the age of fifty-two years. Scarcely were the mourning garments worn by loving members of the family soiled, when called upon for double grief. Of a family of seven daughters and five sons and father and mother, she was the subject of our sketch testified on her death bed that although she left behind deeply and sorely mourned her departure, yet those gone before her, would be rejoicing to welcome her in the Kingdom where no sorrow all tears is shed. What a blessed thought for the dear sister and brother, who are the only members of the family left at the old home to reflect upon.

Although they sadly mourn her departure, yet their loss is her gain, our sympathy goes deeper for those loved ones at the old home, for other members of the deceased family have families of their own, consequently a brother or sister comes in secondary. Miss MacIntyre was always of a cheerful disposition and not until a couple of weeks before her death, she yielded to the cause that was working its way sure and certain to end her life. Being of a kind and sympathetic nature, she often denied herself for making others comfortable. As an instance of this, she paid for a respectable young man, who came lately from the old land to seek employment in the city of Toronto, but failing to find any and falling sick with typhoid fever and had no home or friends, Miss MacIntyre paid his fare for six weeks in the hospital. Surely if this young man is living he ought to feel to come and shed tears over her grave. Miss MacIntyre was baptized by immersion by the Rev Dr Castle, of Toronto. She died on the farm in her home. Those brothers and sisters who were in the old home, will sadly bear of the sad news of another breach in the family. This is the third during the last 12 months.

Mrs Rose, another sister, of Bruce, arrived on Monday afternoon but too late to see sister before she yielded to the same ailment and in a similar errand to see sisters and other dear members of the family and to the sentiments of all classes of people who formed their acquaintance, in forwarding condolences to all members near at hand and afar off.

The funeral on Tuesday, the 7th inst was largely attended notwithstanding the downpour of rain during the afternoon. The Rev Mr Macintosh officiated at the house and grave. He took for his text "I Frost in the Lord" and made some beautiful references to the firm trust the departed had in passing through the valley of the shadow of death. The hymns "Blessed be the Father" and "Saviour More than Life to me" were sung, the latter being a favorite of the departed.

The pall bearers were three McDougalls (cousins), Hugh McPhail, Neil McKinnon and John Pearson, neither of whom were laid beside father, mother, sisters and brothers in Pricerville graveyard.

The Story of Champlain.

This week Quebec holds the platform of the continent for stirring and thrilling scenes, the predominant feature being the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the founding of Quebec by Champlain. This and other incidents of the French period of a heroic nature—and these were not few—have been seized upon and are this week being reproduced with lavish display and a perfection of historic detail seldom attempted.

We English-Canadians hardly realize how much of devotion, courage, constancy and self-sacrifice was spent in the making of early Canada. As we read the stirring pages of heroic deeds of men as well as men, facing nature in its wildest moods, facing savages who were at once threatened their annihilation, benighted in on the north by warring English settlements, there is forced upon us a pro-French feeling demanding our admiration. It has been well said that "this nation was born of French solitude, pioneered by French religion and blessed by French enterprise."

In a sermon preached by Rev James Barclay of Montreal, recently, there was a generous glowing tribute to early French pioneers. We have space only for his references to Champlain, who deserves ever to be recognized as the first Canadian. He says: "It is more than likely that you have all read the story of Champlain, but it will do us good to read it again. He lived in an age which we are accustomed to regard as a rude age, with rude ideas of civilization and of culture, when manners were somewhat rough and morals not very high. But in the pages of his story we will find little cause for shame, but many opportunities for pride.

The life of the pioneer from France who founded our old and beautiful city, so full of interest and attraction, is a story which may be put into the hands of our school children without any fear of their minds. As a youth he was familiar with the sea, and gained distinction in the French navy; later he served with honor in the army; still later he volunteered, and we have every reason to be grateful that he did, to help in the founding of the new France in the Western Hemisphere. Of his experiences and exploits our annual record an interesting, thrilling story, they present us with a picture of him in a lonely post on the edge of a savage wilderness, the weather intensely cold, bleak winds howling
