An Analysis of Obstruction

Under the above heading the Mon-treal Herald gives an admirable showing of the time and temper spent in Parliament for the plain purpose of making campaign material. The following is an abstract:

the period up to May 3I and that after June 10.

In the former period $15,000,000 of main estimates were voted and passed, $7,000,000 voted but not passed. In the latter $31,000.000 of the main estimates were passed and $26,000, 000 voted but not passed. In the former period of five months the motion to go into supply was obstructed three times by Liberals who had reports to make or important projects to discuss, and thirty five times by Conservatives; and on only four oc-casions did the House go into Committee of supply forthwith. In the latter period of four weeks the House went into supply forthwith nine times and on only three occasions was a motion to go into supply obstructed

"Three months ago the Opposition in the House of Commons gloried in ohstructing the business of the country. To day they try to deny that they were ever guilty of such a wicked thing. But it is in the altered behavior of to day that we have the best proof of their intention in the earlier months of the session.

The session can be divided into three easily distinguishable periods.

The first is the obstruction and slander period, from Nov. 28 to May 31, when the Opposition were lavish with insinuations of graft and corruption' followed by dramatic assertions that there should be no supplies until "grievances were redressed," backed up with spectacular all night sittings.
The second was the Provincial election period, from June 1 to June 10. during which affairs came to a crisis and the Opposition began to realize that, in keeping public servants without pay and contractors without work they were likely to become very unpopular. The third is the business period from June 11 to the present. The second was a transition period, during which the opposition was un-dergoing the change of heart. The true comparison is. therefore, between

From November 28 to May 31 the House of Commons passed only one namely, the French treaty. Since June 10 the House has passed three bills of first class importance, namely the Civil Service, the Railway and

With the splendid crop prospects in the West, The Mail and Empire looks does not think the manufacturing has been seeking to hold the Laurier

-Mr Borden moved at the third reading of the Railway Act amendment that an investigation be made by the railway commissioners to see if standard passenger fares could not be reduced from three to two cents a mile. The motion was defeated, Mr W. F. MacLean, the great champion of reduction, voting with the government. The argument against inthat is needed; to investigate now would be to find railways suffering from the commercial stringency and to enforce now would give the rail ways grounds to increase their rates farmers and producing classes who are more interested in freight than stand over till more prosperous times.
