Early Durham.

We have pleasure this week in presenting the paper given by Dr. J. F. Grant at a recent meeting of the Gnild here. Himself a descendant of Archibald Hunter, Durham's pioneer, he is eminently fitted to record the doings of early days. He must have given considerable care and research to his subject, and we congratulate him on the result. The paper follows and we hope Dr. Grant will continue to show how

Mr Irvine Henderson, of the Experimental Farm, Guelph, made a flying visit to friends here and helped in the election by his vote.

Prior to the year 1837, what we are now proud to call the town of Durham, was an unsurveyed wilderness, The nearest settlement being then the village of Fergus and the most northerly surveyed township being the township of Garafraxa. In that year however, the Government ordered a road to be surveyed from Garafraxa township to the Georgian Bay. This road on occount of its starting point was called the "Garafraxa Road." As soon as the road was surveyed the Goyernment proceeded to lay out free grants on each side to induce settlement.
