1,100 KNOWN DISEASES.

A German physician who has a bent for statistics is responsible for the state-ment that the human frame is liable to 1.100 diseases. If he is correct one can but marvel at how few of these ailments the average person manages to contract during a lifetime.

The eye alone is subject to no less than 48 different and distinct affections. Considering its apparent vulnerability to contagion it escapes with great good luck, but in reality it is not as exposed as at first thought would seem. The eyelids are automatic in their protection of the eyeball and the first instinct is to snap shut when a blow is directed toward them. Incidentally they "oil" the eye and keep its surface free from dust, etc. It is for the good of the human race that the practice of medicine has changed during the last 25 years, says the Chi-cago Journal. Formerly there was a specific remedy for each disease, and the poor patient was almost drugged to death. Nowadays physicians recognize that healing is a matter of restoring normal conditions, and more attention is given to favorable influences of mind and surroundings and less to medicine, The German doctor's figures are rather appalling, but the daily progress of the science of health and healing is rapidly reducing the number of dangerous dis-eases, and ultimately may eliminate them. Study and experiment have marched far. Tuberculosis, the white plague, will be fought to a standstill within a few years, the average standard of health and strength will be raised and the average duration of life will be pro-Thus medicine wins greater victories n the science of prevention than it ever won in the science of healing.

RHEUMATISM IN THE BLOOD

Liniments and Rubbing Will Not Cure It-The Disease Must be Treated Through the Blood.

The trouble with men and women who have rheumatism is that they waste valuable time in trying to rub the complaint away. If they rub hard enough the friction causes warmth in the affected part, which temporarily relieves the pain, but in a short time the aches and pains are as bad as ever. All the rubbing, and satin-lined casket that glance will rise all the liniments and outward appli- like Banquo's ghost at the feast and The yearly meeting of the Monteflore cations in the world won't cure startle him just at the moment when nor have radically changed. POWER IN A WOMAN'S EYE.

Men Remember a Glance When All Else About Her is Forgotten.

A woman's eyes are the first objects to attract a mar's attention, and they are the last things he remembers about her. Long after he has forgotten the color of her hair, the dimple in her chin and the soft, sweet sounds of her voice, the look in her eye remains with him. He may not be able to single her glove out of a pile of keepsakes; he may have cast her photograph upside down into the waste basket with a lot of others; the slippers she made him may have been worn out by his valet, but still some particular turn of her glance, some Little trick of dropping her lashes or lifting her brown eyes will be as clear to him as the daylight.
