Priceville

A few nights ago the barn and contents of Duncan Sinclair, of the north line, Glenelg, were completely destroyed by fire by the exploding of his lantern, while doing his chores.

Mr Rose, of Bruce, and two daughters, who were visiting at Mrs Rose's brother, Mr Norman McIntyre, of the south line, left for their home the beginning of the week.

Miss Bertha McIntyre, of the south line, left on Monday morning the 4th inst., to put in a term in the Northern Business College, Owen Sound.

Seth Cole, an old stageman, visited Priceville for a few days last week. On the 1st January mail was changed from the old system of nearly sixty years from Priceville to Durham, by being carried in vehicles for the last half century and before that for some years on foot or on horseback.

Miss Jane Wright, teacher, who spent some time with her sister, Miss Jenima in this town, left for St Anns again this week, to resume her duties as teacher.

The sidewalks are pretty well filled up, while the concessions running east and west are in some places bare. Miss Christina McDonald, town line, South Glenelg, leaves for Toronto this week, where she is going to spend some time as dressmaker.

Last Sunday was Gassie day in the Presbyterian church Priceville, and for the first time in the history of the church at Priceville, the singing was led on organ by Miss Bertha McIntyre and was a great improvement to the old way, as the old organs generally led in singing gaelic, are getting worn out, so we hope someone else will continue the good work begun by Miss McIntyre, who we regret is going away this week, as will be seen elsewhere in these items.

We extend congratulations to Mr Hugh McPhail, who joined hands with Miss McMorlock, daughter of Mr Arch McMorlock, of Benlinton, the 21st Dec. inst. By the slight acquaintance we formed of the bride we take her to be a lady who is possessed of all the good qualities that goes to make a happy union. So we welcome the young bride to our locality and wish Mr and Mrs McPhail long life and prosperity together on life's journey.
