

HER ORDERSHIP'S ROMANCE

"What am I to do?" asked Agatha, hopelessly. "I wish we were back again at Lynnewood."

"You can do nothing," said Lady Lyne, but gradually she came to her senses. She spoke; she avoided taking his arm as much as you can; but mind, this must be done gradually. It would be dangerous to arouse suddenly the anger or jealousy of such a man."

"I never want to see him again," said Agatha, but impatiently. "What have I to do with him, or he with me, that I should fear him?"

"What, indeed?" sighed Lady Lyne to herself; then she changed the subject to that of her sister's case. She felt an indescribable relief. After all, if Rinaldo saw that Agatha did not like him, and would never love him, he could not blame her for that. He would simply turn his attention to some one else."

"What is the matter, Philip?" she said, "Why are you looking so sad?"

"I am vexed with myself, Inez," he replied, kissing the beautiful face, always so bright and loving for him. "I have been so brilliant and pleasant for me lately, that I have been neglectful where I ought to have been kind."

"Tell me all about it," she said.

"That I will," he replied. "There is nothing like owning one's faults cordially. Some years ago I knew the Earl of Wyverne. I met him abroad, and he took a great fancy to me. He wanted to visit him at Severn Castle. You remember you sent a telegram to me that day?"

"I remember," she said, gently.

"He had only one child," continued Lord Lyne, "a beautiful girl of seventeen; and he was passionately fond of her. He confided all his affairs to her. His one great grief was, that at his death this idealized child would be left penniless. I said nothing to him, but in my own mind I resolved that which took place last year; and I am told that his idealized daughter is out in the world, gaining her livelihood as best she can."

"But had she no relations who could have helped her?" asked Inez.

"None," he said. "I spent all her life at Severn Castle; and the poor, ruined, prodigal earl had few friends. The man who succeeded him was a man of fortune whom he detested; so he was enraged at the condition in which he found the estates, that even in the presence of Lady Florence he spoke most unkindly of her father. This aroused her pride, and when he reluctantly offered her a small annuity from the estates, she proudly refused it."

"I like her for that," interrupted Inez. "The only relative she had was a distant cousin, Lady Blake, who offered her a home. Not knowing what else to do, she accepted of Lady Blake's offer. Lady Blake never ceased harping upon her father's faults; and in sheer disgust, the poor girl looked out for and found a situation as travelling companion, and left England some months ago."

"Who told you all this?" asked his wife.

"The lawyer who managed the poor old earl's affairs," and, by the way," continued Lord Lyne, "I shall note that he spoke of Lady Florence; and I should imagine that she is a very fine specimen of a wonderful rarity. She has dropped her title, and has gone abroad with some merchant family. I think he said he had observed something."

"Poor girl!" said Lady Lyne. "It is a sad story, Philip."

"A story that I, who called myself her father's friend, ought to be ashamed of telling," he said, "I cannot pardon myself. Poor, forgotten child! she would think I had deserted her in her hour of bitter need. I shall never rest until we have some trace of her; and then, Inez, my dear wife, you must stoop to her by my neglect."

"That I will," replied Lady Lyne, cordially. "I will help you by every means in my power, Philip. And now, dear, if you have a few minutes' leisure, I want to speak to you."

"I am all attention," said Lord Lyne. "For half a moment his wife laid her face upon his shoulder, while a look of unutterable weariness stole over her. How she loathed and hated this necessity for manoeuvring!"

"You must not think me a match-maker, Philip," she said; "and you must please promise to keep my secret faithfully if I tell you I have observed something."

"I will be all discretion and wisdom," he replied, gladly.

"I think," she continued, "may, I am sure, that the Marquis of Hortington admires Agatha very much. It would be an excellent match for her."

"I should think it would," interrupted Lord Lyne. "He is one of the best young fellows I know, and he will be immensely rich. Do you really think there is anything in it, Inez?"

"I am sure that if he saw more of her, he would soon propose to her," she replied; "that is what I wanted to speak to you about, Philip. You must invite him here. We must have a house full of visitors; but I do not think we consider Agatha enough. She does not care about those foreigners and elderly people whom we find useful. Let from every word or look that would give a dinner party and invite Lord Hortington."

"I will do anything you wish, darling," said Lord Lyne, "but I do not think a wise woman of the world you are."

"Another thing I thought of," said his wife; "those formal dinners are very well for real intimacy. There is nothing like those petit suppers you like so much."

"That is true," said Lord Lyne, with an air of profound wisdom. "You are sure to see Lord Hortington some time to-day," she continued; "ask him to join our party, and go to the concert with us. You will find how eagerly he accepts the invitation. Treat him casually, as it were, ask him to return with us when the concert is over. He can have a seat in our carriage."

"Of course he will," replied her husband. "But I forgot, though—your friend, Count Rinaldo, is to go with us." "To be sure he is," said Inez. "I remember you, you asked him. Well, he must not be scrupulous, and let Agatha be always sacrificed to our friends. They must both go. I see nothing against it."

"Nor do I," said Lord Lyne. "But I really blame myself that I have not

A MOTHER'S TALK TO MOTHERS.

What Zam-Buk Did in a Western Home.

Here is just one illustration of the wisdom of keeping a box of Zam-Buk always handy. It is the true record of the various uses to which this great balm was put—with highly satisfactory results in every case—in just one family, and during a few months only. Mrs. C. J. Irwin, of 1111 Washington St., Toronto, writes: "I have found Zam-Buk so very useful as a household balm that I want to make its merits still more widely known. Some eight weeks ago my brother, Mr. C. Proctor, happened a serious accident. While at work, a rusty nail penetrated the palm of his right hand. The rust of the nail poisoned the flesh and inflammation set in quickly. I took him to the General Hospital and consulted a doctor, who advised poulticing to draw out the poison. This was applied, but when my brother was no improvement after a few days, I began apply Zam-Buk balm leaving off poultices."

"The effect was almost magical! Zam-Buk soothed the pain, drew out the poison, and absorbed all inflammation. Healing then commenced, and in a few days he was able to resume work."

"Six weeks ago my husband, Mr. C. J. Irwin, while returning from work quite late in the evening, was bitten by a dog, the dog's teeth being in his hand. I washed the wound with Zam-Buk, and in a few days the soreness was gone and the wound thoroughly healed."

"A third instance of the healing power of Zam-Buk was provided when my little boy, who is now five years of age, was bitten on the hand by a dog. He was playing on a sharp stone, which cut his hand. As soon as I had washed the cut I applied Zam-Buk in the usual way, and in a few days the wound was healed and the little fellow's pain was quite without it."

"I have used Zam-Buk in a pure herbal balm, and cure cut, burn, bruise, abrasion, ulcer, eczema, scald, sore, ringworm, chapped hands, cold, sore throat, and many other ailments. It also cures piles. Used as an embrocation, it makes a new beginning of rheumatism, sciatica, and neuralgia. All druggists and stores sell at 50¢ a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price."

"When Lord Lyne returned he hastened first to his lady's boudoir; she was not there. He rang the bell, and asked her maid where her mistress was.

"Inez," cried Lord Lyne, as he opened the door, "I have had a frightful dream. There is no reply; but she is in the apartment, on a couch at the far end and there lay my lady, with a pale, stiff face and rigid lips. She had lain there senseless for any other of the young men who sighed and made sentimental speeches to her."

"Lady Lyne's face was almost in despair as she watched this trio.

"Could any one imagine," she said to herself, "any creature so entirely without tact. With one kind, and a few kind words, Agatha Lyne might be Marchioness of Hortington, and she neither gives one nor the other. Did ever a girl throw away such a chance as this?"

"All that evening he sat by her, every word in every part of love and devotion stammering to the heart. Agatha was seriously alarmed at what she considered a return of her sister's illness. Many were the dismayed looks exchanged over her than among the sisters as they bent over the pale, stricken girl, so unlike the radiant and beautiful Lady Lyne."

"Lark," she said, "my husband, I have loved you very much, and I have asked one favor from you. Will you grant me one now, at any risk, at any trouble, at any sacrifice?"

"I will do anything and everything you ask me," my dear wife," he said. "No, don't," replied the man, sternly; "the person who takes that umbrella will have to take me."

"Do you ever lose that umbrella of yours?" asked the maid, sternly; "the person who takes that umbrella will have to take me."

"I will do anything and everything you ask me," my dear wife," he said. "No, don't," replied the man, sternly; "the person who takes that umbrella will have to take me."

PITTSBURG.

Traffic of the District Exceeds that of Five Leading Seaports.

(Pittsburg Press.)
George Washington, then 23 years of age, located in Pittsburg 123 years ago as the "gate of the west," and prophesied that a settlement built here was bound to grow and flourish beyond the imagination.

Allegheny county covers a large area, valued with improvements for assessment at over $100,000,000. Its population is over 700,000, and there are 25,000,000 people within one day's ride. Our fuel resources and rail and water facilities are unparalleled, more coal than underlies all England and twice as much mined in a year as in all Russia, and 2,000,000 tons more than the production of France. The estimated extent of 50,000 square miles of coal. Fourteen railroads enter Pittsburg and five great trunk lines centre here. The clouds of smoke by day and the flaring furnaces by night attest the greatness of our industries. Gigantic and stately public buildings show forth the faith of our people and the performance of our community. Miles and miles of boulevards and paved streets, and 250 miles of electric lines, 1,000 miles of natural gas pipe lines, and over 1,000 acres of parks provide civic convenience and comforts that are unsurpassed. At the Union station it is said that a passenger train arrives or departs at an average of about every two minutes each 24 hours. The total record is 1,000 passenger trains daily in and out of Pittsburg.

Our total annual traffic by river and rail for 1907 was estimated at 140,000,000 tons. In 1908 our freight traffic, exclusive of intramit, required 3,300,000 cars, an average of 10,000 per day. Combined the tonnage of New York, London, Liverpool, Hamburg and Antwerp, the world's greatest ports, and still Pittsburg is in the lead.

The banking capitalized strength of the banks of Chicago and Baltimore combined is 48 per cent. of our deposits, and our bank resources $1,208 per capita.

OUTLINED PROGRAMME.
The Laymen's Missionary Movement has just announced the programme for the National Missionary Congress, to be held in Toronto, March 31st to April 4th.
It opens with a meeting for clergy-men and theological students, to be addressed by Robert Speer, of New York, and other leaders of the regular sessions of the Congress begin with an evening meeting, with an address on "The World's Debt to the Missionary." The speakers for the different sessions are such as: "The Victorious Progress of Missions," "The Place of the Church in the Making of the Nation," "How to Lead the Church to its Highest Missionary Efficiency," "Canada's National Missionary Policy."

Besides prominent missionary leaders from Canada and the United States and prominent returned missionaries, laymen will be addressed by a commission of laymen from Great Britain.

"All you need do is to write for a free box of the remedy which has been placed in my hands to be given away. Perhaps this one box will cure you—I have done so for others. If so, I shall be happy and often that they eventually wear them out."

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows.
SHE WAS A MERRY, MOKING MAID,
AND AS A SHY YOUNG MAN,
BUT WITH A BRIGHT AND BEAMING EYE,
OR MISTLETOE SHE RAN,
CRYING THE WHILE WITH ENGLISH SMILE,
"I'VE FOUND THAT I'M YOUR SISTER!"
"THE PROBLEM STANDS LIKE THIS, I WISH—
SHOULD BE HAD KISSED HER!"
New York Sun.
