PSYCHINE

PRONOUNCED SI-KEEN. Sunday School. LESSON XLII.—DEC. 19, 1909.

Review.—Read Rom. 1: 17, 13-16. Summary.—Lesson 1. Topic: Paul at Jerusalem. As soon as Paul reached Jerusalem he conferred with the elders of the church; he then entered into the temple and purified himself.

IV. Topic: Paul, a prisoner, preaching. Place: Caesarea. After Paul had been in prison two years he was called before Festus, the new governor of Judea; Paul had appealed to Rome; Paul had appealed to Rome; Paul had appealed to Rome.

V. Topic: Paul's retrospective. Place: Written in Macedonia. Paul tells of his sufferings and trials; tells of his revelations; explains why he was there a prisoner; and preached Christ.

VI. Topic: Paul's retrospective. Place: Written in Macedonia. Paul tells of his sufferings and trials; tells of his revelations; explains why he was there a prisoner; and preached Christ.

how great warmth and ardor. 2. He was sympathetic. He wept with those that wept and carried the burdens of the church upon his heart. 3. He was an indefatigable worker. Men do not tire of overwork. Worry kills more people than work. 4. Paul had a persevering spirit. When his course of action was once decided upon, nothing was allowed to hinder him.

Practical Applications. "Paul's career was evidently guided by God. The sustaining power of divine presence is manifest in all his utterances before his enemies. His bearing is like that of a king. After the scene before the Sanhedrin, Paul's spirit sank into discouragement and despondency. Immured in a Roman barracks separated from his friends while protected from his enemies, it is no wonder that even his heroic soul felt the shadows resting heavily. But the Lord, ever sustaining and guiding, mercifully watched a personal visitation and a revelation of His will. The true use of religion is shown us by Saint Paul. It only deserves the name of a sincere faith when it urges us to strive daily that we may become righteous, devout and holy before God, and free from stain in the eyes of our fellow-men. Such striving will make us faithful and fearless, as was Paul."

I. Deliverance from angry men (chap. 21). "The Jews of Asia refused to give careful, candid thought to Paul's teachings, but judged them by their own narrow standard. They mingled fact and falsehood." They saw one thing and thought another. They cruelly and maliciously, under the guise of religion, sought to kill an innocent man, but God delivered him from their hands.

III. Deliverance through obedience (chap. 26). Paul "not disobedient to the heavenly vision" (v. 19) is the great secret, from the human side, of all his marvelous deliverances. On the other hand Agrippa was disobedient to the heavenly vision. He saw the Christ "the prophets and Moses." He knew Paul had spoken the truth; he was convinced that to be a Christian was right; that to know and love and serve Christ was Christ and His representative and loved, perhaps, at the station and power he might have to lay down; and, perhaps, at the taunts, jeers and neglect that might follow him if he became one of the despised, persecuted people. Foolish Agrippa!

IV. Deliverance from shipwreck (chap. 27). Every voyage to the heavenly country has some of hardship and peril. Often the sun shines, and the wind blows softly (v. 23), but sometimes the storms come and the winds are contrary (vs. 4, 7), or tempestuous (vs. 14, 15, 17). If we would meet life's temptations bravely and stand at last and obtain "an abundant entrance" (3 Pet. 1: 17), let us fear not (v. 24), believe God (v. 25), be of good cheer (vs. 22, 25, 36), sacrifice the less for the greater (v. 38), and save others (vs. 42).

V. Deliverance from death (chap. 28). Paul was a prisoner in Rome for two years and was then liberated and went on a fourth missionary journey.

VI. Deliverance and a crown (2 Tim. 4: 1-6). "The crown of righteousness" is for "them that love his appearing," but how can they love that which they know nothing about? To love the Bible and to love what it reveals are inseparable. The Bible, read the Bible, study the Bible, obey the Bible, then shall we find all scripture profitable along every line. The Bible will indeed prove a guide, a sword, a light, a mirror, thoroughly furnished unto all good works, and be able to "fight the good fight of faith" and know that for us is waiting a crown of righteousness.
