MAKING MEAT TENDER.

Cooking In Casserole Dishes Gives

Food a Nice Flavor. The high cost of living is a problem that is troubling many a wise person and seems to overtax the poor house. wife especially. The meat question is one of the most serious, as the best | National Sanitarium Association are putcuts are almost as expensive as jew- ting up against the "white plague"els, and the cheaper cuts if cooked in the ordinary way are so tough as to be unfit to eat.

There is a solution to this problem. It is this: Buy the cheaper cuts entirely and cook them "en casserole." This term may frighten the home cook, who avoids French dishes as she would a Chinese puzzle, but there is nothing at all terrifying about this style of cooking if one understands the art.

For the benefit of those who have never used these "little brown servants" let it be known that a casserole set consists of one good sized covered baking dish large enough for a four or five pound cut of meat, two open baking bowls that may be used for such articles as have to be browned while cooking and so need not be covered and six squat brown "cocottes," or individual dishes. The first cost of this set will be saved a hundred times over by the inexpensive but delicious dishes derived from its use. All foods better for long, slow cooking should be prepared in one of these fireproof covered dishes. For instance, take an ordinary pot roast. It is delicious cooked in a casserole. Use a roast from the round several inches thick or any lean cut of beef, for the casserole is to make it tender. like an addition sign through the meat.

Braise the meat in hot fat until it is well seared, then dredge with salt, pepper and flour. Put the roast in the casserole and pour over it sufficient water to almost cover it. Place the lid on and set the casserole where it will cook at a gentle heat for several

In the little "cocottes" many sa vories may be made. Shirred eggs or rice and lamb mixed with tomato sauce are cooked to perfection in these dishes. Oysters, too, may be cooked in these individual dishes.

He was also deeply interested in the South Grey Farmers' Institute and served as President as well as being a director of same for many yeare. A liberal in politic . he contested South Grey ia the Liberal interests in 1886, and while ansuccessful in the contest he won general respect by the manner in which he conducted the campaign. His advice in South Grey Liberal circles was always appreciated and the Liberal Association of the riding at its annual meeting lasl week passed a resolution expressing deep regret because of his death and of sympathy to his family. It was he who first asked the late Senator Landerkin to become a political candidate in South Grey, and it was also he who first requested Mr H. H. Miller to allow his name to go before a nomin ting convention. In religion, a Presbyterian, he participated in the establishment of West Bentinck Presbyterian church. He was an elder of the church since 1876 and was superintendent of the Sunday School for about 20 years He held very decided views on the temperance question, and atthough in very feeble health he went to the poll in January last to cast his vote for Local Option.
