The way the British by-elections are going would seem to indicate that the Asquith Government is in greater danger of immediate destruction then it has been since its formation. Many theories are being put forward to explain the situation. It is said, for example, that there is a great body of Unionist Free Traders who, in elections, when there is no chance of defeating the Government, vote Unionist, but who, in a general election, when there is a chance of electing a Protectionist Government, vote Liberal.
