WOMEN NEED A SAFE TONIC

And There Is Nothing Better Than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Toning Up the Blood

It is said that woman's work is never done, and that it is a fact that whether in society or in the home her life is filled with more cares and more worries than falls to the lot of man. For this reason women are compelled to watch the growing pallor of their cheeks, the coming of wrinkles and the thinness that becomes more distressing every day. Every woman knows that ill-health and worry is a fatal enemy to beauty, and that good health gives the plainest face an enduring attractiveness.

What women fail to realize is the fact that if the blood supply is kept rich and pure, the day of the coming of wrinkles and pallor, dull eyes and sharp headaches, is immeasurably postponed. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are literally worth their weight in gold to growing girls and women of mature years. They fill the veins with the rich, red blood that brings brightness to the eye, the glow of health to sallow cheeks, and charms away the headaches and backaches, that render the lives of so many women constantly miserable.

Mrs. William Jones, Crow Lake, Ont., says: "I feel that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life. I was so badly run down that I could hardly drag myself around. I was so bloodless that I was as pale as a sheet, and you could almost see through my hands. In fact the doctor told me my blood had all turned to water. I was taking medicine constantly, but without benefit. My mother had so much faith in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that she bought me two boxes and urged me to take them. How thankful I am that I followed her advice. Before these were gone I began to feel better, and I continued using the Pills until I had taken five more boxes when I was again enjoying the blessing of perfect health, with a good color in my face, a new appetite, and I feel sure a new lease of life. I will always, you may be sure, be a warm friend of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

If you are weak or ailing begin to cure yourself to-day with the rich red blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make. If you do not find the Pills at your dealer's send 50 cents for a box or $2.50 for six boxes to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and they will be sent you by mail, post paid.

FRENCH RED TAPE.

Cat's Allowance Continues Though Cat Is Dead 12 Years.

About twelve years ago the Paris prefecture of police had a pet, a tortoiseshell cat named Mou.

Poor Mou died in April, 1901, but its memory is still kept fresh in a way for which the prefect has every reason to be thankful. An allowance of $72.50 per annum was made from the police treasury for Mou's keep and the entry figured in the books of the department. The entry still appears every year and the prefect still draws the allowance of $72.50, although the vacant place left by Mou's death has not been filled.

Before the item can be struck out of the budget it would be necessary to have the cat's death legally certified by a notary or by a State document, and as cats have no civil status the difficulty is got over by continuing the allowance.

OUR SAILOR PRINCES.

Expected They Will Make a Four Months' Tour Through Canada.

Prince Albert is, it is understood, more anxious than ever to be allowed to make the navy his profession, while what he has seen of the empire has made him, like Oliver Twist, "ask for more." This desire is likely to be gratified about 12 months hence, when it is expected that he will accompany the Prince of Wales upon a four months' tour through Canada.

A warrant officer named Brown, who went around the world in the Bacchante with the King—then Prince George—and Prince Albert Victor, narrated a little anecdote of that time the other day, which he said had never before appeared in print. It happened in the Mediterranean, when the Bacchante was at Civita Vecchia. Brown was told off to keep in close touch with the two young princes when on shore. Soon after they landed Prince George, with a roguish twinkle in his eye, slipped a sovereign into Brown's hands, observing: "I think, Brown, you will manage to amuse yourself very well in Civita Vecchia." Brown pocketed the sovereign and the suggestion, giving the Prince what is known in nautical parlance as a little more rope.

Brown, among his other experiences at that time, visited Jerusalem. The party went on donkey back from the coast. When some distance from their goal Brown's donkey threw him. His subsequent experience he relates as follows: "I tried to mount the donkey on the starboard side, and couldn't do it. Then I tried him on the port, but I'm hanged if I could manage that. The end of it was that I got into Jerusalem three hours after the rest, dragging that donkey."

The two princes laughed heartily when they heard why Brown lagged behind.

Women have more sense than men. Women cry at weddings, but the men grin.

FORTUNATE YOUTHS.

Little Heirs to Great Estates on the British Isles.

Who is the luckiest youngster in the kingdom? Examination of the peerage reveals many interesting cases of boys of tender years, who will one day inherit vast riches, estates, and great family honors, the most fortunate, perhaps, being the five-year-old Earl of Arundel and Surrey, the son of the Duke of Norfolk, who is heir to both his father's and mother's estates. The Duke of Norfolk owns 50,000 acres in some of the fairest English counties, his rent roll exceeding a quarter of a million a year, while the Duchess of Norfolk—Baroness Herries in her own right—owns 18,900 acres, says London Tit-Bits.

The Duke is one of London's great land-owners, owning a considerable slice of the south-east side of the Strand, and, according to a competent authority, the rent roll of this land a couple of decades ago was $260,000. Now buildings in Norfolk and Surrey Streets have immeasurably augmented the rent roll, which has probably increased a great deal more.

A year previous to the birth of the Earl of Arundel and Surrey a son was born to the Marquis of Bute, "the uncrowned King of Cardiff," as he has been called, whose father left the enormous fortune of $300,000,000. His son and heir, the Earl of Dumfries, a bright little youngster of six years of age, will inherit vast estates, which cover 117,000 acres, in addition to many titles. Lord Bute is the wealthiest peer in Scotland, although he does not possess quite so many acres as the Earl of Dalhousie, who came into the title, an income of over $250,000 a year and about 130,000 acres of land, when a boy of nine. His son and heir is Lord Ramsey, who was born in 1904.

Two more instances of vast fortunes which will descend to lucky youngsters, not only from their fathers, but also from their mothers, are afforded by the cases of the Marquis of Blandford, son of the Duke of Marlborough, who is now sixteen years of age, and Viscount Maudeville, son of the Duke of Manchester, who was born eleven years ago. The Duke of Manchester owns some 70,000 acres of land, and is also possessor of four country residences, two in England and two in Ireland. His wife, Miss Helena Zimmerman, daughter of an American railway magnate, whom he married in 1900, brought much wealth to the Manchester family. With two exceptions the Duke of Marlborough is the smallest of our dual land-owners. He possesses about 26,500 acres of land, the revenue being given at $180,000.

Quite a number of heirs to large estates were born in 1894, the same year as the Prince of Wales, and such names as Lord Whitechester, grandson and heir, after his father, to the Dukedom of Buccleuch and Queensberry, occur to one readily, says Ladies' Field. The Duke is easily the biggest landlord in this country. He owns 400,000 acres, mostly in Scotland, and much of it is barren land. The Earl of Hillsborough, born in 1894, son of the Marquis of Downshire, will inherit some day 120,000 acres. A great many acres of his future property are in Ireland and some in Berkshire.

Among the most illustrious names of heirs born in 1895 is that of the Marquis of Devonshire. His inheritance will number some of the best known estates in the country. The acreage the duke owns is 198,572, the annual value of which is $903,750.

TIP TO NEWLYWEDS.

From Those Who Married When It Was Fashionable to Save.

Henry Brown's father and mother were married when the senior Brown was earning $1.25 a day, with occasional layoffs. They started housekeeping in two rooms. She did the housework, made and mended the clothes, took care of the babies and by her capable ways made it possible for her husband to lay something aside. Out of those carefully accumulated accumulations Henry was educated.

Henry expects to be married this fall. He draws a salary of $25 a week. His girl is the sweetest creature on the face of the earth—in Henry's opinion—but she can't cook, she has to have a maid, and she and Henry are planning to start in a classy apartment. At the beginning their home will be sweller than that of the old folks ever was.

But we shall miss our guess if Henry at the end of the first year shall have anything in the bank. Or at the end of the second or third or tenth.

Henry's father used to make a very satisfying meal on mush and milk.

Catch Henry doing that! He might, for sometimes men do have old-fashioned longings. But Henry's bride wants sirlon steak for hers.

A ride by rail for even a few miles, especially for pleasure, was an event in the lives of Henry's pa and ma.

But we are willing right now to go on record with the prediction that it won't be long before Henry and his frau will be whizzing through town and country in an automobile. It may not be paid for. And it may cut alarming holes in Henry's $25 per week. But the Joneses and the Smiths have autos; and the Browns are going to be every whit as good as they.

Of course, it is right that the young generation should be better off than the old. That's what progress is for. The wonderful achievement in wealth production during the last two score of years would be ghastly practical jokes if young Brown and the young Mrs. Brown that is to be couldn't start their home-making on a higher economic plane than their parents knew in the scantier long ago.

But that that we said better off. What is better off?

Is it to be in debt right at the edge, with no cushion for an emergency?

Or, is it to use hard, practical sense and self-denial in the spending of an income, so that what's spent brings in a tolerably durable return; and so that, no matter what's bought, something is always saved?

Custom, the most cruel of tyrants, makes spendthrifts of most of us.

Whereas, 40 years ago custom was rather on the side of thrift—it was fashionable to save.

If custom is like a pendulum, swinging between extremes, wouldn't it be a pretty good idea for the newlyweds this fall to give it a push toward frugality!

Real Irish.

One day an Irishman and an Englishman were standing at the corner of a busy thoroughfare, when a blind man passed close to them, and walked straight into a public house. Pat, who had watched the incident, remarked to his companion that he couldn't understand how one who had lost his sight could walk so unerringly. The Englishman began to point out to him that blind men had more of the other senses, such as touch, smell, &c. "In fact," he said to Pat, "if a man is deficient in one way he always has it in another." Then all of a sudden the light dawned over Pat's clouded brain, and he excitedly exclaimed, "Begorra, you're right there, me boy. I saw a man to-day who had a short leg, and, bedad, his other one was a little longer!"

THE TORN TICKET.

How a Gentleman Befriended a Lady Traveller.

In an East Coast train a gentleman noticed that the lady opposite seemed ill at ease. She was searching through her bag and her gloves, and then made an investigation of the seat and floor, apparently without success, says the Liverpool Post.

"Can I help you in any way?" he inquired after this had been going on for some time. "I regret that I can't," she replied; "it's my ticket from London. I've lost it." "Well," he said, "I think I can arrange that for you. He tore off a corner of his own ticket, gave the ticket itself to the lady, and put the fragment in his pocket. On arriving at their destination the lady gave up the ticket and passed through the gate. Later came her fellow-passenger. Him the collector stopped and asked for his ticket. "I gave it you," said the passenger. Thereupon an altercation ensued, the outcome of which was that the stationmaster was called in, and the case was laid before him. "Will your collector kindly go through those tickets and see if he has one from London with the corner missing," demanded the passenger courteously. The ticket was found. "Now," he continued, "see if this piece fits it." It did fit, and the collector was too much surprised to venture any further remonstrance on the moment. But there was a twinkle in his eye which showed that he was not without a sense of humor.

LAW SUITS IN ENGLAND.

Only One Man in Twenty-five Resorts to the Courts.

Litigation is not keeping pace with population in England, according to a special report on the subject by the Government. The number of lawsuits has declined until now only one Englishman in more than twenty-five resorts to the courts. The exact proportion being 3,969 suits per 100,000 of population. In England there is one judge to every 1,130,000 persons. But divorce suits are on the increase, the applications by husbands exceeding those by wives in the proportion of five to four. One marriage in every 250 now ends in divorce, separation or annulment. The average duration of a marriage that ends in the divorce court is eleven and a half years. In 33 per cent. the duration was five to ten years, and in 29 per cent. it was ten to twenty years; 36 per cent of the couples divorced were childless. Divorce is almost unknown in some of the agricultural counties, there having been in the year only 11 in Dorset, with a population of 223,000; only 9 in Wilts, with a population of 287,000, and but 1 in Hereford, with a population of 114,000. Nottinghamshire County, population 604,000, had 183 divorces, and Lancashire County, 4,768,000 population, had 1,287.

LATEST DIPHTHERIA CURE.

Hot Air Method Adopted by Dr. Rendu, of Paris.

Dr. Rendu, of Paris, has a novel and seemingly successful method of treating diphtheria by inhalations of hot air. Having proved that the microbes of diphtheria are destroyed by exposure to a heat of 140 degrees F. for five minutes or of 158 degrees F. for two minutes, he tried the effect of air at such temperatures upon the disease itself.

Diphtheria is generally localized in the upper respiratory passages. Dr. Rendu first experimented upon himself to ascertain how great a heat his throat would bear. He found that he could inhale dry air at 212 degrees F. for two minutes, and at 140 degrees for half an hour, the temperature being taken at its entrance to the mouth. It was, of course, necessary to protect the lips and the rest of the face, which he did with compresses soaked in water.

Having proved that the human throat could bear, Dr. Rendu tried the hot-air treatment upon thirty-three others with the ordinary anti-diphtheric serum. The results were identical, the mortality being 15 per cent. in each case.

Many a man has lost his self-control and acquired a black eye simultaneously.

MAY BE ONLY RUMOR.

Will Prince Arthur Be the Next Governor-General?

Everybody is speculating as to whether the rumor that Prince Arthur of Connaught will succeed the Duke of Connaught as Governor-General of Canada, is founded on fact. One society woman, whose position at the British court entitles her words to some respect, states that without doubt he will be the next official occupant of Rideau Hall. The various diplomatic missions which Prince Arthur has undertaken to almost every country in Europe, on behalf of the late King Edward as well as King George, have revealed in him high qualities of tact and diplomacy. Like his father, the Prince is a keen soldier, and is loved by the officers and men in his regiment. In society he is an equally popular figure.

Between the Prince and his future wife there is a sharp contrast in mode of life. Few princesses have led so quiet a life as the Duchess of Fife. London society scarcely knows her. Both her own and the tastes of her mother have dictated this course. She has led the quiet life which her parents preferred, and has been the constant companion of her mother, the Princess Royal, and of her younger sister, Princess Maud. Among the few young people admitted to her intimacy, the Princess is very much liked; she is remarkably well read, an expert with a rod, and fond of country life and all outdoor pursuits.

When the Princess Royal is in residence in London, a Highland piper, clad in his kilt of Duff tartan, and with the sprig of boxwood in his glengarry which adorns the bonnets of the Clan MacDuff, is always on duty. At Mar Lodge in Scotland, a great deal of Highland state is always observed, and every year, under the auspices of the Braemar Highland Society, a peaceful "gathering of the Clans" takes place, known as the Braemar Gathering, when the Duff and Farquharson men and the Balmoral Highlanders march on the ground with tartans flying to the strains of the bagpipes, and bearing such obsolete weapons as pikes and battle-axes.

In Defence of Stepmothers.

Stepmothers (according to a lady who stands in that relationship) have more to contend against than most people realize. They are always compared with the first wife, generally to their disadvantage. There are, of course, some bad stepmothers, but the good stepmother abounds, and she does her duty amid difficulties unknown to the ordinary mother. Too often the children in her new home have been poisoned in their thoughts towards her by some ill-natured relative or friend of the family. Noting that she does it right, because she is a stepmother. But this slur on stepmothers is a cruel and unjust thing. The misdeeds of a few are used to condemn a whole lot.

One for Tobacco.

Tobacco is exceedingly efficacious in the killing of microbes, according to Messrs. Langlais and Sartory, two French experts, who state their experiments have shown that in five minutes tobacco smoke will kill almost all the microbes in the saliva, thus nearly completely sterilizing the mouth. One of the experiments carried out by MM. Langlais and Sartory was to place several cigars in water containing many million cholera microbes to the square inch. The tobacco sterilized and destroyed the microbes in twenty-four hours.

RENOVATING BUCKINGHAM.

Rushing Work on the King's London Residence.

Buckingham Palace is at last undergoing a thorough renovation externally. For the next three months 150 men in eight-hour shifts will be at work day and night without a break reconstructing the front in white Portland stone. Powerful electric lights will be used at night. All the stones to be used have been prepared and numbered to save time.

During the progress of the renovation special precautions will be taken to guard the treasure vaults in the basement, the value of the contents of which is almost fabulous. They comprise the vast accumulations of jewels, armor, pictures, statuary, furniture and objects d'art which have come into the possession of the royal family in the last two centuries. There is no accommodation for these treasures in the royal residences.

The largest of the three vaults measures 300 feet by 200 feet. It is used for the storage of furniture and pictures. The smaller, which is lined with steel throughout, is used as a jewel room. Its contents are almost priceless. It contains more than 6,000 gold ornaments, weighing considerably more than a ton. Many individual items would fetch thousands of pounds in the open market. Most of these jewels are gifts made to Queen Victoria by other sovereigns.
