

PRICEVILLE AND VICINITY

Were you with the many happy buyers who attended Our Opening Autumn Sale?

It is our aim to please the public and in so doing we must keep our stock and prices both right. We are now going through our stock like a cyclone in a Western wheat field cutting down prices to nearly original cost. The lock gates are open and the torrents of bargains that are flowing forth to the buyer are really more than you can comprehend. Come and see for yourself that what we say is right. Just a few reminders of what we have:

AROUND THE VILLAGE

(One of the earliest settlers of this place passed away last Wednesday, in the person of Mrs. Jos. Aussem, who had been a sufferer from paralysis for about seven years. About a year ago owing to her helpless condition she was compelled to leave her home and go and reside with Mr. and Mrs. Dougall McDougall who have faithfully performed the duties assigned them. Mrs. Aussem was highly respected and is survived by one son, (adopted) Bert, who for the last nine months has been an invalid at the Rainbow Lake Sanatorium. The funeral service at the house was conducted by Rev. Mr. Matheson assisted by Rev. Leece and her remains were interred beside those of her husband who predeceased her five years ago and another adopted son, Frank, who died several years ago.

Communion Service was observed here last Sunday in the Presbyterian church. There was a large attendance.

Rev. Mr. Rose of Corbetton will conduct the services here next Sunday and Mr. Matheson will take his place in Corbetton.

Mr. Robertson attended the Teachers' Convention in Kimberley last Thursday and Friday.

Mr. George Black returned to Fort William on Friday after a visit at his home.

Miss Irene Richardson of Chatsworth is a new clerk in Mr. D. G. McLean's store.

Mrs. George McDermid and children returned to Winnipeg after a visit with relatives here.

The Women's Institute held their monthly meeting at the home of Miss Elsie McLeod. There was a good attendance and a pleasant afternoon was spent.

Miss Ida McCusig from Toronto is visiting at her home at present.

Miss Jessie Sauter visited friends in Shelburne last week.

Mrs. Chapman and children who spent a few weeks with Mrs. Robertson returned to Toronto on Saturday.

Miss Ella McKinnon spent the week end at her home.

Messrs Herman McLean and John Stothart went to Toronto on Monday with two cartloads of stock.

Miss Georgina Graham who spent a few weeks here is visiting friends in Flesherton.

Miss Lizzie Mather, in spite of her infirmity, is learning the millinery work in Durham.

Mr. Peter McArthur is spending a few weeks around here previous to going West to reside.

Mr. and Mrs. John McKee spent a few days with relatives in Owen Sound last week.

At her residence, Priceville, Mrs. Aussem, at the age of about 70 yrs. The Priceville correspondent will give the particulars as Mrs. Aussem was an old resident of that village.

The forests are getting stripped of their summer garment. The tall and lofty trees are bare while some of the weaklings protected by the shades of their superiors are yet showing that the frosts or dry season had not so much effect on them as the older ones.

The beauties of Nature have fallen off the older ones while the young ones retain their color for a while longer. In travelling through the woods on a beautiful October day, the rustling of the leaves remind us of fallen humanity. The once crowning beauty of man has turned on the aged to hoary color, the many frosts of time taking effect, and as the leaves have fallen off the sturdy maple or elm, so is the once beautiful pride of man: his hair is fallen and as the bare branches of the old trees show their nakedness, so does the want of the hair show that man is a being subject in many cases to premature old age by being deprived of the once early head of hair.

CASTING A BACKWARD LOOK all those of us that have crossed the meridian of life, will with a deep sigh exclaim once we were like the tender saplings in the woods protected by the shades of the tall and mighty trees, but as the years of our pilgrimage passed along we became as the tall trees and now we are subject to the many ills and woes incident to frail humanity. In the may time of our life when becoming in bloom those of us that are fading like the leaves will remember that once the color of the raven was dyed in the natural wig which was the pride of humanity in the days of their youth. But we see the little saplings that are exposed to the inclemency of the weather in many instances blown down when in full bloom. So it is with frail humanity, — we often see the young boy or girl cut down before reaching manhood or womanhood while the old in some cases, that stood the storms of four-score years are yet standing as the old trees deprived of their beauty in the forests.

The weather took a change and now its cooler and soon the tone will be reversed from "Oh what heat" to "Dear me, I must hunt up my winter

...duds if there are any left over from last winter. But wait a while yet, don't set up a complaint too soon. We may have hot days yet as Indian Summer is still to come.

Sunday, 12th October, was communion day in the Presbyterian Church in this town and a large number availed themselves of the opportunity of being there. Three young boys and two young girls joined for the first time. The pastor in his remarks made references to the many that sat at the last communion table, both old and young, and now that they are surrounding that table in the home above, will be a reminder to those bereft of loved ones of the uncertainty of life.

Rev Mr Rose of Corbetton will take Mr Matheson's pulpit next Sunday while Mr Matheson will take Mr. Rose's at Corbetton same day.

...ers well know we have always endeavored to supply a paper that we considered would be a benefit to the reader, excluding things calculated to be hurtful to the morale of the community, and to help any cause that had for its object the spiritual and moral well-being of the community at large.

Subsequent to 1885 he was for 20 years on the staff of the Methodist Book Room and having been a steady paying member of the Typographical Union, he was since reaching 70 in the receipt of an annuity of $240 a year which with other resources gave him leisure to devote to his great hobby, geological research.

In him the naturalist overshadowed the printer. From youth up he talked with nature. He used to catch frogs as a boy, build houses for them and watch their habits. His parents, especially his mother, were of observant mood and he early became interested in shells, rocks, fossils, etc., through talks with his father and this laid the foundation for the subsequent great service he did to Canadian fossil research.

He explored the rocks of the Grand River and the Saugeens as no other man did and his name will be forever associated with some new species he discovered and which scientific men agreed to name after him. He amassed one of the best collections in Ontario and national and other collections were enriched by his industry when he decided to sell it. Even the name Durham lives in science through him a six whorled shell, first discovered by him bearing the name "Pleurotomaria Durhamensis."

He did field work for the government in later years, his explorations being conducted at and near Collingwood, the Tyndall quarries, Winnipeg, at Calgary, at Phillipsburg, Quebec, at Lake Champlain, Kirkfield, Trent Valley and other places.

He was a devout member of the Methodist church, a genial companion and an interesting conversationalist, especially on science. He married late in life but his wife preceded him by a good many years.

Such is a brief sketch of the life and work of the founder of the REVIEW.

Rev Mr. Ward of Varney preached a fine sermon in Knox Church last Sunday, Mr. Kendall taking charge of anniversary services at Ebenezer.
