Excitement over Oil Findings runs high.

Dear Review Readers: Among the large cities of our Dominion, Calgary in many respects, and in the main, favorably holds pre-eminence. In population with 90,000, it ranks sixth in the list of Canadian cities, being surpassed only by Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Hamilton and Ottawa in the order named.

In modern large business blocks and buildings, however, Calgary in proportion to its size, surpasses any other city we have visited. The Hudson-Bay Co.'s storey store, immense C. P. R. hotel, new Herald building, are notable examples. The city has a great number of paved streets, is well lighted through a serious drawback is the congestion caused by the main business streets, like Toronto's, being only 66 feet wide.

Calgary in former years was almost wholly surrounded by hills but to such an extent has the city spread the last four years that the hills, on the north and south especially, are now largely populated as well, the south being the choice residential section. The main portion of the city lies in a flat between the junction of its two rivers which, when brought to our attention recalled to mind the old conundrum we had heard, "Why is Calgary like a maid in the lover's arms? Because she is situated between the Bow and the Elbow."

Another claim to distinction, though not perhaps so creditable, is that it is the most sub-divided city in Canada. For miles around in business streets is worth enormous figures, and a 25 foot lot on any business or residential street within one or one and a half miles from city's centre is worth at least $5000. Lots in subdivisions a few miles out are now offered for sale for $200 to $300, with payment spread over 20 years! Property has been quiet this summer, in common with the other western cities, and no advance has taken place. The tight money market is apparent here as well, though not evident to so great an extent in our eyes as in Saskatchewan. There are quite a large number of unemployed in the city and the town around, and men are seen congregated in front of the employment agencies, keeping tabs on the openings for work. Many are reluctant apparently to leaving the city for the winter, and we look for hard times and suffering in many quarters before spring opens up.

But just at present Calgary is not worrying much over real estate or in the case of a great many of its citizens the conditions of the labor market. What occupies the limelight in the conversation and thoughts of thousands of the people is oil. Ever since a little over a month ago, when W. S. Herion, the oil pioneer of Alberta, discovered oil at the Dingman well west of Okotoks, some 25 miles from Calgary, the city has given comparatively little attention to any other subject. Lands have been leased wherever oil indications prevail, and this extends right from near Lethbridge and McLeod for a couple hundred miles north as far as Innisfail, or further. Medicine Hat vicinity is also leased, and drillings are in operation in many points, though as far as we are aware, no further flow has yet been struck. It has been a bonanza for the Government at any rate thus far. Many companies have been organized and floated in Calgary, but the dailies have been aggressive in warning the public of the chances they are taking in investing in these stocks. Oil experts nevertheless, are very optimistic as regards there being large oil fields in the western part of Alberta, of which Calgary would be the natural headquarters and should oil be struck in large profitable quantities, it would, who knows reach the half million in population in ten years.

Besides its attractions as a clean well-built and bustling place, Calgary has another magnet in its mild agreeable climate, in common with the western half of the province. With sunshine most days, a mild fall right up till Christmas usually, very little snow even in winter, and about three weeks only of severe cold weather, tempered by the refreshing "chinook" winds, it is the more enjoyable to one accustomed to rainy weather and sometimes heavy snow storms and blizzards during the fall months.

We felt practically right at home in the city, where we enjoyed the hospitality of, and met so many friends from Durham and the townships surrounding. They are engaged in many different callings or lines of business, all are getting along well in this western city. To refer to all at this time would make rather too lengthy a letter, so we will leave it till next week to mention individually the many home friends it was our pleasure to meet. -P. R.

Youthful Appearance

An Asset to Every Woman Gray Hairs a Source of Discontent Every woman wishes to look young always. Gray hairs mean the passing of youth's charm. They are the source of many a heartache to many and many a woman. But they need not be. Hay's Hair Health restores gray hair to its natural color. It is not a dye.

By its tonic qualities, by promoting a new vigorous healthy growth of the hair, by removing dandruff, by furnishing to the scalp and the hair roots a new life it brings back the real color and lustre to the hair.

If, after a fair trial according to directions, it fails to do this we will refund your money. $1.00, 50c Get it at our store. Sold and recommended by MacFarlane & Co., Druggists, Durham, Ont.
