FACTS.—Merchants there are who look upon advertising as an "expense," but they are wrong, absolutely wrong. Advertising is really an investment—an investment that yields returns proportionately to the amount of energy and brains put into it. If advertising didn't bring returns, how do you account for its popularity today. The man who knows how to advertise considers the investment decidedly trifling as compared with the benefits derived from it. However, to be able to write a good advertisement is an accomplishment. An "ad" thrown together in any old style is not likely to get the business. Pains spent in writing an "ad" is well worth the while—therefore take pains and above all tell the truth. Advertisers who fill their space with lies bring their business and newspaper advertising into disrepute.
