Manitoba Elections

The Roblin government received a bad shaking up on Friday last in the general election. A safe majority of about eighteen was reduced to two, and there being three deferred elections yet to be held, it may completely fall. Besides some of the government majorities are small and re-counts may easily turn the tables. The great issues were the school question and temperance, in the latter respect meeting with more success than Ontario.

May Be the New Speaker

From Toronto Star
It is said that Dr Jamieson of South Grey may be selected as Speaker of the Legislature, to succeed Mr Hoyle. If so the choice will be an excellent one and will probably be entirely approved by all the members, unless perhaps one or two who may secretly fancy that the post should have been theirs.

Dr. Jamieson, although a comparatively young man is one of the oldest members of the Legislature, well versed in rules of procedure and by temper and natural aptitudes seems qualified to preside over the deliberations of the House with a dignity, firmness and tact that, if we may say so, has not always been exercised.

How It Happened

Under the above caption the Christian Guardian, while lamenting the defeat, sees abundant ground for hope and encouragement. It says after discussing: "In the first place a temperance issue, or a moral issue of any kind, does not stand a good chance when a snarl verdict is asked for from the people, following only a few weeks' campaign. This was really the first time the banish-the-bar policy had been before the people, it had about three weeks' advocacy, and it was gaining supporters every day up to the last."

In the second place temperance sentiment, even genuine temperance sentiment, is slow to be consistent when it comes to an election. The late Sir George Ross had a theory that temperance people could never be depended on when it came to voting time. And he was absolutely right within certain limits. Surprise the ordinary temperance man with an election, and, in spite of the issue which he professes to hold supreme, he will get over with his party so quickly that you can hardly see him going. Of course he isn't quite comfortable there sometimes and, in the end he may come back to consistency but it is a process and takes considerable time often.

Remembering these two things, remembering also that the Government's record touching temperance had been a fairly good one and the record of the Government that preceded it in the same manner not a very good one, and remembering also that the liquor interests are very quick to throw their influence over on the side that seems least likely to hurt them, and we have an explanation of the voting in Ontario that still allows us to be abundantly hopeful for the future of temperance reform throughout the province.

"Sorry for the Preachers."

(From the Canadian Baptist)
Weep not for the preacher who was defeated in the battle against the bar, but weep for yourselves and your children. The preachers who took part in the fight and who cast their votes for the men who were pledged to abolish the bars and club licenses and afterwards the shops on a majority vote, can now look upon the infernal liquor traffic as a thing in which they no longer have a partnership by their own consent. It now belongs to the good Christians who would not hear the prophets their party for a good cause though one rose from the dead (as doubtless many would if they could) to curse the liquor traffic that cursed them while they lived. Praying Christians, distillers, brewers, bar-owners and boozers who voted to continue this abomination of desolation now own the business, all in partnership with the Devil and King Alcohol. If there be any comfort or consolation to this fraternity when they read of the success of their business in the Police Court records of this city "Toronto to the good" as follows, drunk! drunk! wife-beating! chauffeur drunk, murder, death from delirium when drunk, etc., the preachers can take great consolation from the assurance of their own conscience. Our heads are not red with the blood of these victims. Their blood be upon their own heads and especially on those who voted to continue the bar.

"Be not deceived God is not mocked, whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." They that sow the curse shall reap the curse. They that sow the blessing shall reap the blessing. That law was not put upon the statute books by a three-fifths majority, and it will take more than a three-fifths vote to bring about its repeal. It is new in operation, and when governments pass into oblivion it will continue to operate. The preacher tried to sow a blessing for Ontario. Then weep not for the defeated preachers.

HUERTA'S ARMY.

Extraordinary Style of Soldiering in Mexico.
An English war correspondent has some hard things to say about Huerta's army which has been recruited largely by seizing men and women off their streets. He declares that the officers do not take soldiering seriously and that the men, lazy and untrained, hate to fight as much as they hate to work.

The troops are accustomed to live in trains. Their wives are taken along, too, to act as army service corps. They would never be in a hurry to start. They enjoy the lazy side of soldiering.
Torreon, the town recently captured by Villa, was taken by the rebels once before, in September last. After denying for a week that it had fallen the war office admitted the truth, but said that it would be retaken in a few days. For a month or so nothing happened. Then it was announced that "a blow would be struck." Gen. Velasco would start at once and the rebels would be driven out of Torreon. The Government had been urged to act vigorously because in the cotton district a record crop was in prospect and being picked. They responded by putting a new tax upon cotton "to meet the cost of the war-like operations," and by doing nothing!

The forces which were to retake Torreon advanced and retreated, chased and set to partners, marched this way and marched that. Gen. Velasco was frequently reported to be not with his command, but in Saltillo. Not until Dec. 10 was Torreon retaken, and then only because the rebels had drawn off and left the garrison very weak.

After the evacuation of Torreon by the Federal Gen. Munguia was tried by a court of inquiry. The intention was to shoot him. This was his defence: "How could I meet the rebels in the open?" he asked; "they fight in loose formation. I was obliged to keep my troops together. If I did not they would melt away. Desertion is the idea uppermost in almost every soldier's mind. Again, how could I order my officers to lead their men to the attack? I knew their men would shoot them down as soon as they got the chance."

Mexican generals have unfortunately very little talent for war, and they make, as a rule, no attempt to "lick their men into shape." Officers in command are incredibly slack. At a small battle in the State of Morelos, the Federals by use of machine guns forced the rebels to retire. The nature of the country made it easy for them to retreat. But the Federal colonel looked at his watch. "It is time for dinner," he said, and told his bugler to sound the "Cease fire." The rebels leisurely went away.

That kind of incident, which happens daily, helps to keep current the belief that Federal officers do not wish to bring the war to an end. They do not take soldiering seriously. The Mexican army has no army service corps, no medical department to speak of. It carries no camp equipment, no supplies. Watch a field force break camp at dawn. First there go pattering off a horde of women laden with pots and pans, blankets, sometimes babies. These are the soldaderas, the camp followers, the commissariat of the force. That they move as quickly as they do is a miracle. Whatever the day's marching may be they are always on the camping ground before the men arrive. They rig up shelters, they cook tortillas and frijoles (maize cakes and beans), they make coffee. You see them mending their husbands' coats, washing their shirts, roughly tending flesh wounds. Without these soldaderas the army could not move. While President Huerta was seizing the streets of Mexico City by night, the marching ground before the men arrive. They rig up shelters, they cook tortillas and frijoles (maize cakes and beans), they make coffee. You see them mending their husbands' coats, washing their shirts, roughly tending flesh wounds. Without these soldaderas the army could not move. While President Huerta was seizing the streets of Mexico City by night, the marching ground before the men arrive.

This extraordinary system accounts for the immobility of the Federal troops. Compared with the rebels they are leader footed. They cling to the railways as to the box cars, in which they live with some comfort.

The Word "Ogre."

Old fashioned etymologists used to say that the word "ogre" commemorated the sufferings of Europe during the tenth and eleventh centuries at the hands of the ravaging "Oigours," or Huns. This derivation, however, is now abandoned. "Ogre," which reached the French language by way of Italian and Spanish, is really Orcus, the Latin hell, afterward the god of the underworld. In Romanesque folklore this god became a shaggy, black, man-devouring monster, with a particular taste for lost babes in the wood.

Pretty Thin Gold.
The gold beaters of Berlin at the Paris Exposition showed gold leaves so thin that it would require 252,000 to produce the thickness of a single inch, yet each leaf is so perfect and free from holes as to be impenetrable by the strongest electric light. If these leaves were bound in book form it would take 15,000 to fill the space of ten common book shelves.

Bright Prospects.
Manager (hiring office boy)—Well, my lad, what do you say? Applicant—Before I take the job, sir, I'd like to know if there's any chance of promotion. Manager—Well, as to that, it depends on the boy. The last one we had here owned the whole place before he'd been with us two months.

Told Him.
The lawyer was endeavoring to pump some free advice out of the doctor.
"Which side is it best to lie on, doc?"
"The side that pays you the retainer."
