

PRIEST SHOT BY GERMANS

Terrible Scenes of Suffering Among the Thousands of Belgian Refugees

A despatch from Pas de Calais says: The aged Abbe Bogaret came of Pardelles, near Hazebrouck, has been shot by the Germans, because he was unable to give them the key of his belfry, from which they wished to make observations. He told them quite truthfully that his belfry, on being mobilized, had taken the key away with him. Having buffeted him cruelly, they marched him off and shot him forthwith.

Such terrible scenes of suffering as one must witness hourly in this woe-stricken land, for the exodus from Belgium has spread. The multitude of starving refugees all over the country, between Dunkirk and Boulogne, makes one's horror and detestation of German military methods more and more fervent.

The anguish of individuals constantly strikes a chord of pity in the heart. Food supplies are running short with all these extra mouths to feed. Milk is very scarce, coal was put up five francs a ton on Wednesday morning, horsemeat is replacing beef—there is no mutton or pork—and the supplies of wine and beer are running short in Picardy that if the Germans ever get into Pas de Calais they will have a chance to get sober.

Wholesale Arrest of Germans in England Creates New Problem.

A despatch from London says: The wholesale arrests of Germans throughout England has brought the German Benevolent Society face to face with a problem equal to that of the first few weeks of the war. The large majority of those arrested have been employed steadily and their families will be dependent during the stay of the broad-winders at the detention camps. A procession of motor buses filled with young Germans and Austrians and guarded by soldiers with fixed bayonets, recently passed through the streets of London on their way to the detention camps. This was the round-up of Germans, Austrians and Hungarians throughout the United Kingdom, only those having naturalization papers issued prior to the war being spared.

It is estimated that there are 3,000 alien enemies in the United Kingdom, of whom a majority are in London. The burden of combating London and its environs falls on Scotland Yard, and all day long the forces attached to the Metropolitan Police stations have been working at high pressure. It will take some time to completely clean up, in spite of the fact that a majority of these aliens have been registered with the police since the outbreak of hostilities.

Five hundred have been arrested in Manchester in 24 hours, and the numbers elsewhere are in proportion. At Northampton a prominent German who was manager of the local street railway system was forced to resign in spite of the fact that he had lived in England for 27 years. It is said that he did not take out his naturalization papers until after the war began.

SCENES OF ENTHUSIASM.

Russian Students Are Called Out By the Czar.

A despatch from Petrograd says: Under instructions from Emperor Nicholas orders were issued on Wednesday from the War Office calling out the students of universities and high schools, who ordinarily are exempt from military service. The order, in conjunction with the report that the Russians had gained a decisive victory, caused great enthusiasm among the populace. A small parade which started on Wednesday afternoon grew in volume until the wide Nevsky Prospekt was choked with people. The demonstrations surpassed any held in Petrograd since the commencement of the war. The paraders carried pictures of Emperor Nicholas, the new Russian flag, and also the British, French, and Belgian colors, and sang the national anthem as they marched.

The demonstration reached its height before the Embassies of the allied nations, where the cheering crowds were greeted by the diplomatic corps.

Some fifty members of the Portrush company of the volunteers have already signified their willingness to serve at the front in Lord Kitchener's army.

The north of Ireland power loom weavers have decided to raise the rates of employment by 12 hours per week, and are to consider the question of running full time.

The Teuton arrested in Ireland on a charge of having bought horses for the German government had thirty suits of clothing in his house, to wear, presumably, as disguises.

The death has occurred of Lord O'Brien at Airfield, St. Looey, county Dublin, at the age of seventy-two. He was for nearly twenty-five years Lord Chief Justice of Ireland.

The Coleraine Shirt and Collar Factory, employing over 500 hands, has been on three-quarter time for some weeks owing to the shortage caused by the war and the trade depression.

The old established coach factory of Messrs. Lynn & Co., in London, has been totally destroyed by fire. A fireman named William was injured by being burned by a falling wall.

Eighteen German detention prisoners recently arrived at Amiens street railway station, Dublin, and were escorted by a detachment of the Royal Irish Rifles to the Royal barracks.

While motoring from Bangor, Miss Irene McGowen, sister-in-law of Mr. Chapman, a Belfast manufacturer, was shot by a sentry on Orlock Hill, Donegadale, and died in the Bangor Hospital.

Owing to a dispute between the Sligo Branch of the Irish Transport Workers' Union and Messrs. Campbell & Co., of Belfast, contractors, all work has been abandoned and all men paid off.

German and Austrian Subjects Are Being Interned.

A despatch from London says: Mr. Fred Stobart, purchasing agent for the British Government, is at the Windsor Hotel, and will place orders for a million sweater coats, a similar number of pairs of gay worsted socks, a million suits of heavy underwear, and a million heavy English army shirts, besides bed gilds, which will run into about a million dollars. Many hair brushes and shaving brushes are also wanted. These orders have nothing to do with the Canadian contingent, whose outfit is being looked after by the Dominion Government. The clothes are for the British army now in the field and in training.

BATTERY FOR SUBMARINE USE

New Cells Obligate Necessity of Inhalation Chlorine.

A despatch from West Orange, N. J., says: It became known to-day that Thomas A. Edison has been working for nearly two years on a special storage battery to replace the lead ones now in use in the submarines. The present battery generates chlorine gas when its cells become flooded with salt water, resulting in the weakening of the lungs of members of the crew and making them easily subject to pneumonia for months after. The battery was exhibited to Government submarine and electrical men and officers. The new battery has been tested under all conditions and circumstances and has proved entirely satisfactory. The battery will be offered to the navies of the world.

GERMAN HOMES TO MOURN

The President of Prussian Diet Speaks of Nation's Sacrifice

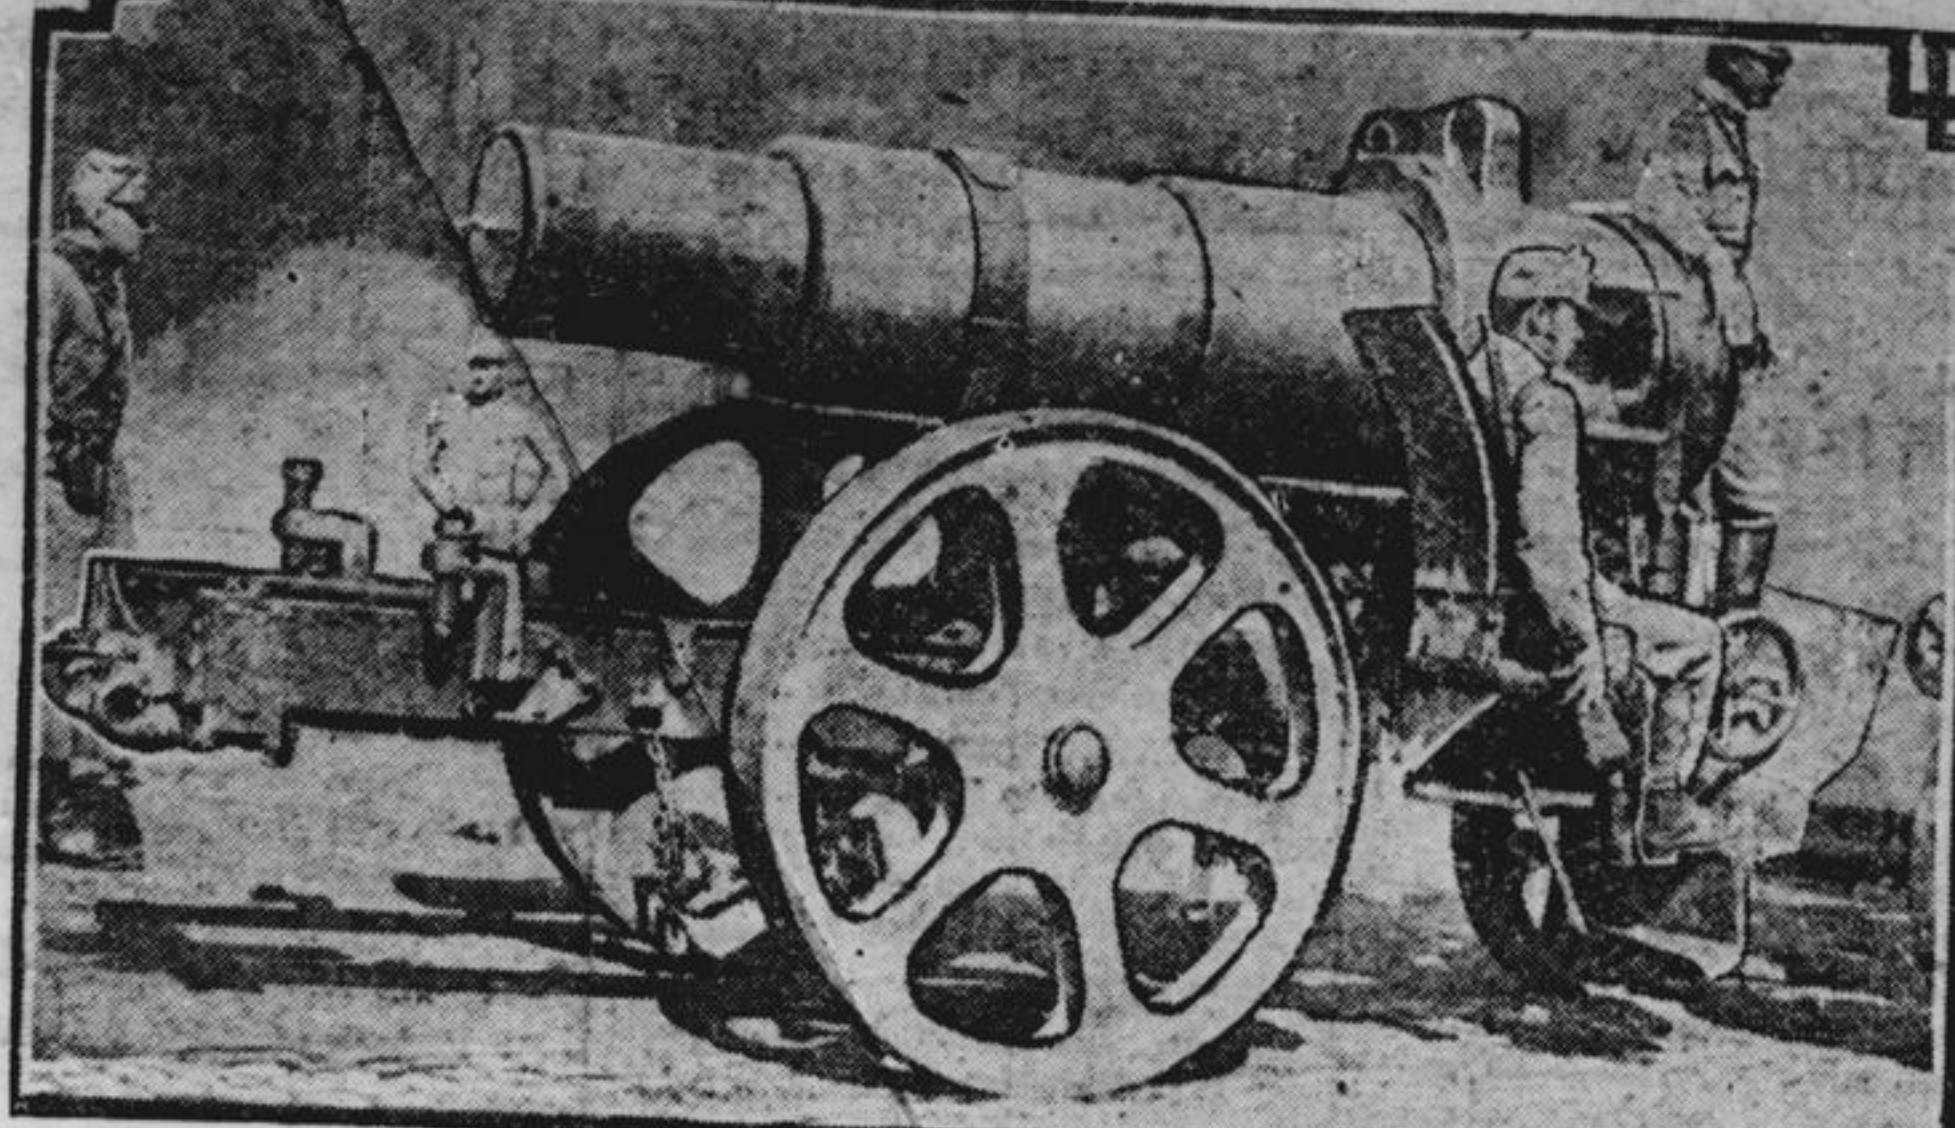

A despatch from Berlin says: Count von Schwerin-Löwitz, President of the Chamber, in his address to the Prussian Diet said: "The times are bad, but we should feel proud that we are permitted to live and see them. There will be scarcely one house in our country that does not mourn for somebody. Innumerable other sacrifices we still have to make, but we shall show our enemies what unconquerable power the consciousness of fighting for a good and just cause can bestow upon a united people. We have honorably striven for peace, but have been forced into a war by jealous and envious enemies, not to fight for a greater sphere of power, the enlargement of our empire or on the basis of commercial profit, but to defend our homes and our families."

Count von Schwerin-Löwitz declared that Emperor William and the people of Germany were unbending in their purpose to continue the war, regardless of sacrifice, until a lasting peace was secured. He ended by calling for cheers for the Emperor and for the army and navy. These were given enthusiastically.

BRITAIN WAS TOO PROMPT.

German would have settled with Russia, then Britain.

A despatch from London says:

Austrian and German subjects of military age, who, since the beginning of the war, have been allowed their liberty in Britain, unless they rested under some suspicion, are to be interned in detention camps. The police during the last few days have been arresting hundreds of men between the ages of seventeen and sixty-five and sending them to camps in different parts of the country. More than 200 were arrested on Wednesday in London, and a large number in Manchester and other large cities. This action of the Government is necessitated, it is said, because of the facilities offered German spies to enter the country with Belgian refugees under the pretence of being Belgians. Wealthy bankers and merchants are receiving the same treatment as small shopkeepers and waiters. Those who failed to register or contravened any of the rules under which they were allowed to reside in their own homes are being prosecuted.

BRITAIN WAS TOO PROMPT.

British men and women have settled with Russia, then Britain.

A despatch from London says:

British men of science and professors in all branches of learning at the universities have combined to frame a reply to the German professors who recently denounced

Great Britain as the instigator of war. This reply sets out pain-takingly the evidence of official documents to prove Great Britain's desire for peace. Among the more striking passages is the following:

"One point we freely admit. Germany very likely would have preferred not to fight Great Britain at the moment. She would have preferred to weaken and humiliate

Russia, to make Servia a dependent of Austria, to render France innocuous and Belgium subservient

and, then, having established an overwhelming advantage, to settle accounts with Great Britain. Her grievance against us is that we did not allow her to do this."

"I became alarmed and tried dieting, wore my clothes very loose,

and used other remedies, but found

no relief.

"Hearing of the virtues of Grape-

Nuts and Postum, I commenced

using them in place of my usual

breakfast of coffee, cake or hot biscuit, and in one week's time I was relieved of sour stomach and other ills attending indigestion. In a month's time my heart was perfectly well again and I could climb stairs and hills and walk

long distances.

"I gained ten pounds in this time,

and my skin became clear and

I completely regained my health and strength. I continue to use

Grape-Nuts and Postum for I feel that I owe my good health entirely to their use.

"I like the delicious flavour of

Grape-Nuts and by making Postum

according to directions it tastes

similar to mild high grade coffee."
