Hundreds of trucks, it is said, daily haul this produce to the Finnish railway station in Petrograd, taking roundabout routes in order to distract attention. An inquiry has revealed that Swedish commission merchants who buy from the Finns in most cases represent houses in Hamburg. The extraordinary demand for the Russian rouble, in coin or in bills, in Sweden and Denmark, and the high prices offered for produce resulted in an inquiry being started by the Ministry, which now is engaged in seeking a method to determine what portions of the shipments constitute legitimate trade for the Scandinavian countries, and to prevent supplies reaching the Germans.
