Through Langemarck Safely

Belgium, May 2nd, '15

Transporta, 1st Bait, 1st Brigade 1st Can. Contingent, Brit. Exp. Force Dear Father and Folks at Home:

Here I am again; I suppose the stirring times we're having around here will be making you all anxious about me, but I am fine and dandy yet. Nelson Campbell and all the other boys of the Corps are fine and hearty with the exception of a few casualties and wounds.

But believe me we've been going some the last couple of weeks and I'm afraid lost a lot of men. I think the greatest part of our casualties are slight wounds and that a lot of the men will soon be able to rejoin their regiment again.

You bet I was glad we did so well against the rascals. The day before the big battle there was nothing unusual going on. We were having a regular sports day when about six or so in the evening the artillery started and you bet they made some noise. The German aeroplanes came over us and kept letting out signals.

In a few minutes soldiers were ordered to be in the next village came running out telling us that the French had been compelled to give way and had let the enemy through their lines.

The Germans had used their poisonous shells and gases and had scared the liver out of the French men. They beat it anywhere at all to get out of the way of the Germans and the gas and the poisonous shells. The gas soon became full of refugees running for their lives.

I felt sorry for them, some were too feeble to walk or crawl, still they struggled along. One poor old man came pudgling along with his poor old wife on his back—too far gone to crawl any further.

About 1 o'clock the Batt. moved off and went back in action. They had to advance over an open space and the 1st and 4th battalions got it the heaviest and they lost a lot of men before they could take cover of any kind. Of course we transports were not looking on or sitting still by any means. By this time we had lost a couple of horses, a mule or two and had five wounded men. One of our ammunition limbers was struck by a shell and knocked to pieces. The team hooked onto it was not injured but the driver was thrown from his horse into the air and got hurt in the spine. Another driver got wounded in the leg, another named Smith was badly wounded. The Atkinson boys would know him as he at one time worked in the livery stable at Holstein. Another 30th man from Berks was killed so you see the transports had their share of casualties. I'm lucky though,—the shells are scared of me. Capt Campbell is in fine trim; he's just in his glory in the war game.

Well I must stop this or I'm afraid it will not get past the censor. I hope sister Florence is well again and that you are all well at home. Don't forget to write me lots. I haven't had a letter now for two weeks and sometimes it's impossible for us to write here. Something is wrong with our mail service so our letters are held up somewhere or another.

Well I started this epistle in Belgium but failed to get it away. Now we're back in France recuperating and being reinforced for the next splash. Just as I was finishing this letter we got orders for the first line of transports to go up with ammunition. The Battalion had gone up at reserve, so we had to "stand to" behind them all night, a peash of a job, one of the soldiers' delights!

The next night we moved here. We left camp about 9.30 landing here about dawn. It was a light drizzle rain all the way so we were all soaked through and all tired out. I could scarce keep the saddle and had about sixteen sleeps along the road, waking up every time the horse gave a big jolt or a bad piece of road.

We're in a fine large town now and we're enjoying ourselves again fine. For the last couple of weeks something went wrong with the mail but it's alright again. Last night I got three letters all at once from you, one dated April 8th, another April 12th and another April 19th. Also got one from Bertha saying they were wondering how I am getting along.

Well guess I'll make another start to finish my letter. I suppose I'll get it away by Xmas if I keep at it. I've just been out with the ration companies and we are all kept very busy, even when we are supposed to be resting.

I can imagine you all at work on the farm picking stones, &c. Am afraid I'm spoiled for farm work for we're all as lazy here as yellow dogs. We are having fine weather here now, the trees are all in leaf. This is a fine country round here.

If you send parcels wrap them up very strong or they will not reach us. Also put lots of gum in them; water is scarce and gum goes good to thirsty guys like me.

Well this is a fair sample of a newspaper this time. I hope old man sensor lets it go past. Tell my old friends around Durham to write me and to put in all kinds of fun and to not expect me to write as we are only allowed to write one letter per week and often don't get time to write one. We are often three or four days without our shoes off and are often in the saddle fourteen to sixteen hours out of the twenty four.

Well I must close now, so hoping you are all in the best of health. Be sure to remember me to all old friends and tell them I'm alright yet. Have had a few scratches but have been able to keep out of the Drs hands and he doesn't know me yet.

An revoir for this time,
Yours as ever
Wm. E. Falkingham

We trust Mr. Atkinson will rapidly recuperate from injury.

It is opportune time now that that hot season is setting in, to draw the attention of the citizens once more to the importance of having their premises thoroughly cleaned up—yards, cellars, wells, cisterns, etc. There are some cases of typhoid already at there may be more unless every household loyally does his part help the Board of Health to put the town in as sanitary a condition as possible. I am having the public water supply tested and would ask the local physicians to report all such cases in writing, stating location and whether supply whether from well or water works. J. G. HUTTON, M. O.

WALKERTON COMMENTS—Hera Times: "A Nautical Knot," a musical opera which was full of courtesies and marriage, was put on by the Durham Choral Society in the Opera House here on Friday night under the auspices of Walkerton branch, I. O. E. The play was splendid, the crowd was large, and of $90 taken in, it goes into the coffers of the Walkerton Society. "A Nautical Knot," presented by the Durham Choral Society in the town hall on Friday evening under auspices of the Daughters of the Empire was well attended. The opera was well presented and thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. The choruses were well received and the solos by Miss Zeta Black, contrasted and worthy of special mention.
