

GIRLS

Queer Water Folk.
You were fishing and felt
on your line, and when you to pull it in you suddenly got a shock of electricity. You shook the line in fright
and what had taken your mind of that kind would
you caught a torpedo fish.
Some fishermen who are hauling do not receive an electric shock. They know that they are hauling a torpedo fish in the net,
the shock it sent out has killed
the fish in the net.
The power of sending out electric shock has been given to the fish to enable it to escape its pursuer, for it is a common, and could not be the slowest of the fish in the sea. The torpedo fish swims along it sends
out a shock which kills its victim
in a few minutes.
The fish is a living electric battery. It is so powerful that it will kill a human being.
The power of thinking that nature is so powerful that it can send
out a shock which kills its victim
in a few minutes.

GREAT DEJECTION IN BERLIN
OVER THE VERDUN FAILURE

10,000 Women March Through Unter den Linden
Crying "Peace."

A despatch from London says: Despatches from Basle quote the Swiss newspapers as commenting that the slump on the Frankfurt Bourse, following a week of great buoyancy, reflects the financial opinion of Germany regarding the situation at Verdun. The Rotterdam correspondent of the London Daily Mail telegraphs: "The German newspapers have ceased to be jubilant over the campaign against Verdun. The Koelnische Zeitung, under the caption, 'The March of Verdun,' was content to give optimistic extracts from the French papers. The Frankfurter Zeitung also confines itself to replying to articles in the French and British press, thereby preparing its readers for failure. Practically all the German papers while declaring that the French are hiding their fear under optimistic reports, print consoling accounts from their own correspondents in neutral countries purporting to show the "excellent effect" of the German offensive. The latter papers ignore Verdun and turn their attention to conscription in Great Britain and the German war loan. The Copenhagen correspondent of the Daily Mail says: The reports reaching Berlin of great losses at Verdun, notwithstanding the attempts of the newspapers to be cheerful, have caused general dejection, especially among women. On the night of Feb. 29 ten thousand women marched through Unter den Linden crying "Bread" and "Peace." The police dispersed the manifestants.

GERMAN ASSUMPTION MERE DESIRE TO KILL

Sir Edward Grey Points Out That Teutons Are Wholly Unjustified.
A despatch from London says: Sir Edward Grey, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, authorizes for publication the following statement: "The assumption apparently made by the German Government that all British merchant ships are armed is entirely incorrect. Practically all British merchant ships employed in trade between the United States of America and the United Kingdom have hitherto been unarmed. The claim, therefore, made by the German Government to sink all British merchant ships at sight because of their armament is one which cannot possibly be justified. This is clearly proved by the statement issued on Tuesday night giving a list of British and neutral merchant ships which have been torpedoed by German submarines without warning."

RETURNED SOLDIERS IN CIVIL SERVICE

A despatch from Ottawa says: Some 279 returned soldiers have so far been given employment in the various branches of the civil service during the last fiscal year. Of these 260 have been employed in the Militia Department and 19 in other departments.

MAJOR-GENERAL GORRINGE WOUNDED AT THE FRONT

A despatch from London says: Major-Gen. George Goringe is mentioned in a casualty list just made public here as having been wounded in the fighting in Mesopotamia.

THE WEEK'S DEVELOPMENTS IN THE WAR.

The German offensive in the neighborhood of Verdun developed during the past ten days into a determined drive toward the fortress. Reckless of the cost in men, a large German force was thrown repeatedly against the French positions and succeeded in occupying a number of villages and considerable terrain, although at terrific loss. The French withdrew from their advanced positions to prepared positions of greater strength, in so doing inflicting enormous losses upon their opponents. The German drive, directed originally against the French positions almost directly north of Verdun, shifted to the east where further advances were made. Here, again, however, the French checked the enemy's drive toward the fortress, and, despite some withdrawals, occupy positions of great strength.
The German offensive at Verdun is taken as the first move in an attempt to secure a favorable decision on the Western front before the British and French complete preparations for the Spring campaign. Apparently the Teutons are risking everything upon the outcome of the contest in the west. There is a feeling now that other theatres of war are of only minor importance. Events of tremendous importance are impending on the Western Front. These may be accompanied by enemy naval activity and air operations on a scale hitherto unattempted. News from other fronts has been meagre. The Italians have completed their evacuation of Durratzo and the town is now probably in Bulgarian hands.
