NOTES AND COMMENTS

When Kaiser William on October 31, 1898, dedicated the Church of the Redeemer in Jerusalem and made one of his characteristic speeches directed at the ancient French protectorate over the Catholic communions in Syria and elsewhere throughout the Turkish Hats, veils, shoes, parasols, dainty this was part of the promotion of the general lines of the costume. peace is but the logical result of the more a low-shoe favorite. existing facts, which in themselves are the climax of twenty years of intrigue and diplomacy that under the aegis of William have brought the cross and crescent into an open and unabashed relationship of mutual admiration, with "frightfulness" the method and manner, whether the scene be laid in Armenia or in the North

Moreover, this treaty, which follows the style of those which bind France, Italy, Great Britain, Belgium and Russia together, makes it clear to that at last Turkey is the real dominant ally of Germany and Au tria-Hungary although its own ambitions were the immediate cause of the war being but secondary in the projects of the War Lord and his associates. For while Germany has ever been ready to support the pretensions of Austria-Hungary in the Near Eart, at its back doors in the Balkans, she has ever had in mind the larger ambitions which looked to Constantinople and Bagdad as her own sphere. And to realize these meant that the Turk, whatever his record of blood and rapine might be, must be viewed as the "great and good friend." Consequently, it is all working out exactly as the Kaiser hoped when he sowed the seed of discord among Christian people twenty years ago while ostensibly humbly dedicating a Christian church in the floly City to promote peace on earth and good will to men.

One thing at least is gained by this frank recognition of the absolute equality of the Turk and Kultur, and that in that all the hypocrisies and pretenses of the past are over. The alliance is for the sword and by the sword, and its overthrow will be by the sword in the hands of those who were counted as negligible when the Sultan and the Kaiser completed against dwindles u ually to the face veil, of althe civilization the latter was sworn most invisible mesh, intend merely to to defend, but which he has sold keep the hair in place. Enver Pasha Aspires to Regenerate His Country.

Any one who reads Turkish history for the last eight years-the Young Turk movement the deposition of Abdul Hamid, the Turkish revolution and the Balkan wars-constantly meets the name of Enver Pasha, cays World's Work. This statement has one ruling idea—that he is a man of destiny, a man almost divinely appointed to regenerate his country.

In his working room he sits with a large picture of Napoleon on one side and one of Frederick the Great on the other. The e men are h's herces, and what Napoleon did for France and Frederick for Prussia Enver aspires to do for Turkey. There is, indeed, semething in common between his career and that of the Corsican.

Like Napeleon, Enver came into power on the crest of a revolution. L'ke Napoleon, he succeeded in turning this revolution into a personal asset. Both men became powerful fir ... as military men.
