GROWTH OF MODERN NAVIES OF THE WORLD.

Britain's Strength Ever-Increasing Through the Centuries.

In the great battles of the sea previous to the end of the eighteenth century the amount of tonnage of wooden craft engaged was comparatively small, while the number of ships was large. Thus the Emperor Claudius sank 2,000 Gothic ships in A.D. 260; in the great battle of Lepanto, in 1571, when the western powers, led by Venice, first united to dispute the Moslem dominance of the Mediterranean, the Turks lost over One of the remarkable stories of the 250 galleys and 30,000 in killed,
