It is an amiable inbadges and buttons upon themselves as though the larger part of a man were his lapel. In proportion as one is a minus quantity intellectually one some Russian effects seen, which most is likely to confound the eye with external trappings. The wholesale business done in distributing the Iron Cross seems to indicate that one who knew the foibles and frailties of human nature sanctioned a mintage so lavish that it would have gladdened the heart of an apostle of free silver.

Plenty of hair upon the chin has been supposed to make the soldier formidable. "If Russia would shave," said Dooley before the war, "we shouldn't be afraid of her." Shakespeare's man of war was "full of strange oaths and bearded like the pard." Yet the beard in the French army, which has given his name to the "poilu," "the hairy one," is at last to pass under the shears; and General Pierre Cherfits estimates that with 2,000,000 men on the firing line, at sixty grammes apiece, this means a sheer loss in weight of 120 tons to the French army. It was to be expected that academicians and artists, sculptors and literati would unite in elegiac strains to lament the passing. Auguste Rodin, who is bearded like unto the Spanish live-oak with its moss, delivers himself of an impassioned apostrophe. "Men without beards, women without sex, statues without heads, bodies without arms, humanity without weakness, that is my opinion."

Some men, infirm of purpose, wear beards to hide the vacillating chin. The President of the St. Maurice Forest Protective Association of Quebec, patrolling 12,000 square miles of forested and partly settled country, states under date Aug. 31, 1916:

"We have been so successful under the Permit System that we would under no circumstances go back to the old way of handling fires. The settlers have co-operated with us in every way and their satisfaction is universal. So far we have had not a single fire caused by a settler, a most unusual and satisfactory record." What says the Chief Forester of the highly organized Western Forestry and Conservation Association, Portland, Ore. "In our Pacific Northwestern States, the burning permit is as accepted a part of fire prevention as patrol or fire fighting. None considers abandoning it. Last year in the State of Washington alone, nearly 13,000 burning permits were issued and under them 118,000 acres were burned over. The Permit is an absolute essential of any serious attempt to reduce fire in a developing forest region.

And this is British Columbia's testimony: "From experience gained in British Columbia the unqualified statement is made that unless brush burning is controlled by means of permits, no real fire protection is possible in a timbered country."

Bruises.

A bruise, or contusion, is caused by blow or by strong compression of the soft tissues. It is an actual wound of the subcutaneous tissues, and is less serious than an open wound only because the unbroken skin usually prevents it from being infected. That does not mean that pus never forms in a bruise, for the blood can carry infection, and if germs lodge in the lacerated tissues they will cause inflammation.

The first result of a severe bruise is pain; next comes swelling and discoloration. That is owing to the escape of blood from the torn vessels, and it is usually more marked where the tissues are loose; that is why a The pain of a bruise is best reliev-
