How Prohibition Works in Toronto

No one who has lived any length of time in Toronto will suspect Colonel Grasset, Chief of Police for the past thirty years and a former British soldier, of being prejudiced in favor of prohibition. His point of view, habit of thought, and official aloofness from propagandist movements of all sorts have combined to prevent him becoming over-sanguine as to the beneficial effects of the abolition of the bar in this city. And yet on just this point his testimony is calm, convincing and conclusive. The abolition of the bar has, in his own opinion based on well will-ascertained and unquestionably accurate facts, been beyond the most sanguine expectation, successful in accomplishing precisely what the advocates of bar abolition avowedly aimed at. The outstanding fact and incontrovertible proof of that, while there were in the past six weeks only 214 arrests for drunkenness, there were 1,059 in the corresponding six weeks of 1915.

But this fact does not stand alone; it is corroborated by many other germane to the question. For example, the number of police constables required to keep order in the city has been so reduced that the places of those who have gone to the front as soldiers have gone unfilled, and are likely to remain so till they return. Men who were a short time ago more or less mastered by the drink habit have voluntarily informed the police that they are at work, and are sharing their earnings more fairly with their families. A veteran and popular hotelkeeper, in spite of his business loss, says he is pleased with the change that he would never again take out a bar license. Retail shopkeepers testify that the change has improved their business. The road hotels outside the city have lost much of their business by the disappearance of the bars but the farmers and their teams have gained accordingly, to say nothing of their family circles.

Similar social improvements are noticeable all over the Province, and this has already impressed the whole community, the hotelkeepers included, with the belief that bar licenses shall never again be issued in Ontario. That the hotelmen have frankly accepted the situation is clearly seen by their numerous applications to municipal courts of revision for a reduction of business taxes and of realty assessments. Before the three years of probation have expired the people of Ontario will be ready to vote with practical unanimity for the indefinite continuation of the prohibition. It need hardly be said that this implies a like unanimity in the Legislative Assembly of the Province, and the consequent elimination of the liquor question from the arena of party politics.—Toronto Globe.

Conservative Opinions at Conservative Meeting

The Annual Meeting of Ward 6, Conservative Associations in Toronto was held last week. The discussions show that the S. W. Toronto bye election in which a Conservative seat with 3,000 majority was captured by the Liberals, was no "flash in the pan" but a symbol of disaffection with their party and their leaders as the quotations below will show. "Shall we tackle cheers for Borden and Hearst?" some one asked at the end of a stormy meeting. "Don't chance it!" was the answer and they didn't. Listen:

"The Conservative Party is off the track; we have got to do something to get it back again."

"Why not be honest enough to hold a caucus or Convention? Things are in such condition now that unless the two governments listen to the voice of the people, accept criticism, and undertake reform at once and effectually, we will fall in Ontario as we will fall in the Dominion."

"It is no use poking our heads in the sand. Our political enemies have broken through our line and scattered our forces, not because they were the stronger, but because of the lack of leadership and despotic action, both at Ottawa and Queen's Park. They hold all the gains they have made. There are making more every day. . . . We have lost sheep by hundreds and we must either give up or do something to bring them back to the fold."

"The Conservative Party to-day is in a precarious condition. It is not an organized party; it is a disrupted party. Is there a Conservative person in this hall to-night who thinks for a minute that if there were an election to-morrow our party could carry South Parkdale or either division of West Toronto, or for that matter elect any Conservative in any seat in the city after what has taken place, and if we could not carry a seat in Toronto what chance have we got to carry the province?"

GinDills FOR THE KIDNEY'S MARTYR TO PAINS IN THE BACK

Haltax, N.S., Jan. 15, 1916. About eight months ago I read your advertisement in one of the Halifax papers, ordering a free sample of Gin Pills for the Kidneys. NORTH-EAST NORMANBY

Mrs. Rev. Whaley of Durham, will address a Thank-offering meeting of the W. M. S. in Knox Church on Thursday evening of this week at 7.30. We look for a good attendance.

The McGee family of Arthur motored up on Sunday to visit their relatives, the Wallace family. Pte. Ed. Hey of the 195th Battalion Camp House, Manitoba, visited at Mrs. G's home here for a few days before leaving for Halifax en route for overseas.

We look for a good attendance at the Red Cross concert in the School House on Friday evening. Dr. Jamieson, M. P. P. will give an address on Red Cross lines.

At Knox Church last Sunday a special collection was taken up in aid of the British Red Cross and the handsome sum of $125 collected. A special offering will be taken every Sunday until Dec. 2nd.

We hope to hear favourable reports from our two boys from this locality who have suffered wounds, Corp. Wm. McAlister and Pte. Arthur Gadd, who was wounded in the head. No particulars have been yet received of the former, but the latter we understand, is not serious.

Quite a number from Hampden attended Knox Church on Sunday.

Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Petty over their severe loss when barn and outbuildings were destroyed by fire. Mr Petty has since been getting prices for a steel barn which he is considering erecting. He purposes to put up a temporary shed for his cattle in the meantime, the stock now being cared for by different neighbors.

The Owen Sound Sun is advocating the claims of Hugh Cleland of Meaford as the next Liberal candidate in South Grey. He is a son of the late James Cleland, ex M. P. P. for N. Grey. It adds: "In Mr Wright's acceptance of the Nomination in S. E. Grey the Liberals of N. Grey lose a strong possible candidate, but the other riding has gained that."

War Notes

The great and unexpected drive made by the French at Verdun last week is still successful. They hold Doncourt and likely will soon have Vaux.

The Rumanian Army in the Dobruja have escaped the net intended for them and though much of their country is overrun, they have the enemy slowed up and are again winning victories in Transylvania.

On the Somme, the Allies have had progress delayed by bad weather but can't be broken or driven back. Their air superiority is now most marked. The enemy regained a small piece of trench.

A sensation has been caused this week by the torpedoing of a British merchant-man with many Americans on board and without warning. Thirteen are missing, among them residents of the United States, Can't you make of this a roorback to help in election on Tuesday next? Or will he simply write a note?

Norway is in serious plight. One seventh of her shipping has been destroyed by German torpedoes or mines. The purpose seems to be to provoke her into war in which case Sweden might go with Germany.

Keeping Ahead

It was an American business firm who some forty-three years ago showed the world how to perfect the medicinal properties of Cod liver oil and make it pleasant to take which immediately popularized cod liver oil.

Not content with this great success, however, Scott and Bowne have continued to evolve methods and machinery to keep Scott's Emulsion purer and richer than the imitations which patterned after their plans, and ingeniously devised is employed to keep Scott's Emulsion the finest and purest medicinal food in the world.

The refining of raw cod liver oil as practiced by the crude equipments available along the Norwegian coast has never squared with the ideals of Scott & Bowne and they have just completed a spacious refining plant adjoining their laboratories in Bloomfield, N. J. which is refrigerated to the climate of Norway and equipped with
